MESSAGE

I am glad that Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association, Mumbai and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners have jointly published the first edition of “Digest of case laws – Direct taxes (including allied laws) (2003-2011) - A Tax Companion” to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the Bombay High Court, which has made a mark by rendering several landmark judgments in the field of Direct Taxes.

The Digest is comprehensive as it covers the decisions of the Supreme Court, High Courts, Income Tax Appellate Tribunal and Authority for Advance Rulings. The Digest will prove to be a useful reference book. It is designed as a ready reckoner on direct tax laws to be a tool for the busy lawyers and overworked Judges.

All Judges sitting on the Tax Bench always notice that the lawyers arguing tax cases are well prepared and familiar with the judicial precedents on the issues involved. The credit for this commendable feature of the Tax Bar must go to the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association and All India Federation for Tax Practitioners for organising continuing legal education programmes for the members in various forms. This Digest will go a long way in equipping the tax advocates for discharging their duties with competence and confidence.

In the 150th year of establishment of the Bombay High Court, I extend my best wishes to the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association, Mumbai and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners for continuing to render yeomen services to the Bar and the Bench.

The ITAT Bar Association and the All India Federation of Tax Practitioners have brought out a comprehensive digest of precedent on direct taxes for the period between 2003 to 2011. The publication is dedicated to the sesquicentennial of the Bombay High Court. The editorial team as well as the research team which collaborated together with Dr.K.Shivaram and Mr.Pradeep Kapasi have brought to bear their wide experience in direct tax litigation in preparing this volume. The digest will provide a user friendly source to search for judgments on diverse aspects of direct tax legislation in the country. Much of the information which professionals need for their work is now available in an electronic form. But that does not dispense with the importance of books. Research in the conventional mode allows a researcher to cover not only the specific area of focus, but several related areas which have a bearing on the issue. Those who have collaborated in the production of this digest are eminent practitioners. They have spared their time and effort to ensure that this venture provides a valuable addition to the law.

A digest of case law is always most useful for a legal practitioner in any branch of law. I am sure this Digest will be of invaluable assistance to the legal profession, especially direct tax practitioners. The Digest is an appropriate contribution by the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association and the All India Federation of Tax Practitioners on the 150th Anniversary of the Bombay High Court.

MESSAGE

On the eve of the sesquicentennial of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, the members of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners have brought out this unique publication titled "2003-2011 Digest of case laws – Direct taxes (including allied laws) – A Tax Companion".

Perusal of the said publication shows that considerable effort has gone into compiling the decisions of various authorities meticulously and systematically. Care has been taken to see that almost all important decisions have been compiled Section wise, so that complete conspectus of the judicial pronouncements on each and every Section of the Direct and Allied Taxes are easily made available to the readers.

Truly, this commendable digest will be handy to all those who want to have an insight of the decisions under the direct tax law.

J.P. Devadhar.

Justice M. S. Sanklecha,
High Court, Bombay.

To,
The President,
Income Tax Appellate Tribunal
Bar Association.

Dear Dr. Shivram,

Congratulation to you and your team for the outstanding "Digest of case laws-Direct taxes (2003-2011)". The Tax companion made by your team to commemorate 150th anniversary of the Bombay High Court is indeed a fitting tribute to the 150th anniversary celebration of our court.

I have had the privilege of going through the manuscript and found it to be extremely informative and full of knowledge providing a gist of decision of various Tribunals and Courts. The digest would be extremely useful to be practitioners and adjudicators of direct tax laws.

Let me once again compliment the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association for this very useful publication.

Thanking you,

M. S. Sanklecha

MESSAGE

I am pleased to note that I.T.A.T. Bar Association, Mumbai and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners have jointly compiled the very first edition of A Tax Companion "DIGEST OF CASE LAWS - DIRECT TAXES" and equally delighted to know that they are publishing this tax literature to commemorate the 150th Anniversary of the Bombay High Court. I feel that it is a great tribute and respect to the Hon'ble Bombay High Court which has always been the front-runner in deciding many issues on the tax side of the litigation in the country.

2. It is heartening to know over 10,000 important cases are digested in this voluminous publication covering decisions of the Supreme Court, High Court, ITAT. and Authority for Advanced Rulings.

3. It is a unique digest which at one place publishes the cases on a given subject and section, rendered by the different Judicial Forums. It is also unique in another sense that it is not prepared by one individual or a professional or an academician but by a group of professionals most of them are youngsters who have spent tremendous time in compilation of this voluminous Text despite their busy professional engagements in hand.

4. This digest is for the cases rendered by different Judicial Authorities between 2003 to 2011 is the latest of this kind and nature and will be definitely useful in catering to the needs of the tax professionals, departmental authorities and the Judicial Officers. It will help one in locating the decided case law on the subject both section-wise and subject-wise which I am sure will enrich its utility.

5. I have gone through the few pages of this voluminous publication and I appreciate the great work done by the research and editorial team under the able assistance of Dr. K.Shivram, and C.A.Pradeep Kapasi who are its Chief Editors.

6. I place on record my sincere appreciation to this voluminous work and laud the efforts made by its Authors on this subject who have compiled this so that the society gets benefitted in the long run. I wish them all success.

About the Digest

The Digest, placed in your hands, is a unique publication of its kind, published by the two prestigious non-profit organizations of professionals with the untiring and selfless assistance of the eminent people, entrenched in the serious practice of tax laws. It captures at one place, in one volume, more than ten thousand cases of contemporaneous relevance that are handpicked from twenty four reports and magazines that print virtually all that is published in India on the direct tax laws. All the cases on the subject, delivered by different forums (SC, HC, ITAT & AAR), are arranged at one place to provide an easy and quick reference. Each case is duly numbered and is digested in brief with at least three catch words for a quick reference and carries, wherever possible, the relevant assessment year, an editorial note and the news about the status of an SLP, if any. Its utility is fortified with the robust case laws and subject indexes prepared with a high degree of precision.

Like any other good digest of case laws, the reader can reach to the desired case law by referring to any of the indexes on Case Laws, Section, Subject and Chapter. Further to avoid any confusion, the citations of the cases specifically highlight the respective judicial forums that delivered the decisions, while citing the cases. Care has been taken to refer to all the respective reports and the magazines while digesting the cases.

By way of an experiment, which is likely to be followed by many in the times to come, the cases where the Union of India or an officer of the revenue service, whether by name or designation, is the appellant, are indexed in the table of cases under the respective names of the assessee in alphabetical order.

Name of the case:

The Digest shall be of great use for the Judges, Advocates, Chartered Accountants, Tax Professionals, Tax Executives and Tax Authorities, alike.

Wish you a happy referencing.

Preface

'Stare decisis et non quieta movere' ; to stand by decisions and not disturb the undisturbed. In legal context; the courts should abide by the decisions delivered in the past by it and or superior courts and not disturb a settled law. This doctrine known as the law of precedent supports administration of the quick and uniform justice and helps in bringing the stability and the respect for the judiciary and the judges.

Article 141 of the Constitution of India mandates that the law declared by the Supreme Court of India shall be binding on all courts within the territory of India. The principles enshrined in this Article are a tacit approval of the relevance of law of precedents which fiercely advocates the binding nature of a decision delivered by a court of law. The famous decision of the Supreme Court in Kamlakshi Finance Corporation Ltd.'s case has the effect of confirming the position of a precedent as the one with the force of law.

Precedents, besides providing uniformity of construction and interpretation, helps speedy disposal of issues in an over congested courts and helps in delivering timely justice. It immensely helps a professional in proper appreciation of the case before him and the better presentation thereof before the authorities and the courts. It assists in dispensation of advise based on the views of the courts.

Realizing the importance of the case laws for an efficient dispensation of justice, an idea was mooted by the distinguished people to present at one place, the gist of case laws, which are current and importantly, relevant. This herculean task of selecting about eleven thousand cases, out of tens of thousands of cases, reported in 24 magazines, and to summarize them, without being verbose, was undertaken and accomplished by the eminent professionals engaged in the daily practice of law. The publishers realizing the reference value, the Digest would command, has ensured that the contents are accommodated in one volume by the use of the best quality papers.

The Digest is the best tool for managing the scarce resource of any professional, namely, time. Every care has been taken to examine that the Digest gives information that is accurate and contemporaneous and that the citations of the case laws digested are correct. It will however be presumptuous on our part to rule out mistakes that could not have been noticed or corrected, mainly, on account of the mammoth size of the task on hand. Nonetheless, we seek your pardon for such mistakes and request the readers to bring such mistakes to our attention for improvements.

We acknowledge our sincere gratitude to the entire editorial team and all our friends who with their ceaseless efforts and unstinted support made this publication see the light of the day. We shall remain thankful to them forever. We also record our appreciation of the several publications whose reports of the cases, helped us in preparation of the Digest.

We have the pleasure in commemorating the Digest to mark the 150th Anniversary of the Bombay High Court, a court whose contribution to the development of the law has led the judiciary in India to command the great respect.

From the President

Commemorating 150 years of the Bombay High Court I am pleased to present before you a Unique digest of case laws jointly published by the ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners titled "Tax-Companion – Direct Taxes – Digest – 2003-2011". The Bombay High Court, which was established on August 14, 1862 celebrated 150 years on the 14th August, 2011. The Bombay High Court as an institution has produced what can be described as a galaxy of legal luminaries. Hon'ble Chief Justice of Bombay High Court Mr. Mohit S. Shah speaking on the occasion, pointed out that the Bombay High Court has given eight Chief Justices to the Country. No one can overlook the contribution made by the tax bar of Mumbai in the 150 years of Bombay High Court. On the occasion of the release of the Postage Stamp to commemorate of Shri N. A. Palkhivala on 16th January, 2004, then Prime Minister of India Hon'ble Atal Behari Vajpayee stated :—

"In those dark days, the battle for democracy was fought by many people in many different ways. Many of us in politics under the leadership of Jayaprakash Narayanan fought it in prisons. But I have no doubt that one of the finest battles was fought in the court rooms and that fighter was Nani Palkhivala."

Citizens of this country cannot forget the contribution of Shri Palkhivala to preserve the basic structure of Constitution of India. We are proud to say that he was President of ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai and instrumental in formation of the All India Federation of Tax Practitioners.

Hon'ble Chief Justice of India Mr. S. H. Kapadia, then as Judge of Bombay High Court in a message dated June 9, 2003; "My Tribute to stalwarts of Tax Bar" wrote :— (AIFTP Journal – August, 2003 P. 4)

"In the field of Income Tax Law, out of few Luminaries, three legends; i.e. Late Shri R. J. Kolah, Late Shri S. P. Mehta and Late Shri Nani Palkhivala, who devoted their professional practice to the field of Direct Tax Laws. I deem it a great privilege to have been requested by All India Federation of Tax Practitioners to forward to them my tribute to the above stalwarts in the form of a message for their publication."

All the three stalwarts led the Tax Bar in intellect, clarity and integrity. They have provided a valuable legacy in the form of their juniors who today, have emulated these three stalwarts in the above virtues and who, in turn, today are the leaders of the Tax Bar."

I was lucky to have seen the three stalwarts in action when they were not so young and yet, after hearing them for few moments, I came out of the Court with the following words which flashed across my mind."

"The spirit knows no youth or age, no fatigue or death".

These are the qualities and virtues which should inspire our young professional lawyers and I am happy to state that, even today, in the Tax Bar practicing in the High Court, there are young professional lawyers who are following the footsteps of these three legends".

We highly appreciate the very sincere efforts made by the Hon'ble Chief Justice of Bombay High Court and Puisne Judges in disposal of pending cases. It is very much heartening to know that Judiciary in Maharashtra has in two years disposed of backlog of 50 lakhs pending cases. In Direct tax matters about 3500 old references and about 3,000 matters admitted and final hearing, Writ petitions and about 2,450 appeals for admission are pending. We are sure this publication will help the Court in quick disposal of matters and precious time of Court and professionals can be saved. I therefore, dedicate this publication to commemorate 150 years of Bombay High Court as a contribution of Tax Bar to the tax payers.

I make an appeal to the tax professionals to adopt the values and ethics followed by the stalwarts of the Tax Bar and make an honest attempt to preserve the honour and respect of the Tax Bar, without compromising on value and ethics. The Income Tax Bar Association, Mumbai is the first Association which has formulated and adopted a code of ethics. I hope other tax professionals who are not members of the Income-Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association, Mumbai will also follow the footstep of the ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai.

I am pleased to state that the surplus realised from this publication will be utilised for research and educational activities of the ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai and All India Federation of Tax Practitioners including Nani Palkhivala Memorial National Tax Moot Court Competition.

From the President

All India Federation of Tax Practitioners in association with ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai is publishing a publication titled "Digest of case laws – Direct Taxes (including allied laws) (2003-2011) – A Tax Companion" dedicated in commemoration of the 150th Anniversary of the Bombay High Court having Digest of around 10400 Case Laws from Hon'ble Supreme Court, High Courts, Income-tax Appellate Tribunals and Authority for Advance Rulings. The Digest of around 10400 cases will help the tax practitioners to find out the latest decisions at one place. AIFTP has been publishing a monthly Journal and quarterly Digest of Case Laws by referring to more than 24 reports/magazines which has been found most useful, purposeful and handy by all the life members. Through this publication, our 5300 Life Members and 106 Associations spread over the country having a membership of around 60,000 tax practitioners will be benefited at large.

I am glad that Federation in association with ITAT Bar Association, Mumbai is publishing a very useful publication in commemoration of the 150th Anniversary of the Bombay High Court for the benefit of tax professionals, Hon'ble Judges, Hon'ble Members and for the benefit of revenue officials.

Dr. K. Shivaram, Past President, AIFTP, CA. Pradip Kapasi, CA. Mitesh Kotecha, Chairman, AIFTP Journal Committee Arati Vissanji, Chairperson, Publication Committee, ITAT Bar Association and all other associated with the publication deserves our appreciations and heartfelt thanks. I am of the considered opinion that, all our members getting the benefit of this publication will feel obliged for this very handy book for which very useful case laws are mentioned in a very precise manner.

I am especially grateful to my colleagues and everyone who is associated with this publication, since this prestigious publication is coming out during my tenure of office as National President and I will feel proud of everyone connected with this publication through which the year 2012 will be remembered for a landmark publication.

I wish our publication a grand success and I extend my appreciation to all concerned under the editorship of Dr. K. Shivaram.

The Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association, Mumbai

The Income Tax Appellate Tribunal Bar Association was established on 18th November, 1965. Amongst those who held the office of President were Shri G. A. Gaitonde, erstwhile President of the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal, Shri N. A. Palkhivala (1967-2002), Shri Y. P. Trivedi (2003-06), Shri S. E. Dastur (2007-08) and Shri Dinesh Vyas (2009-10). Dr. K. Shivaram has been elected as the President of the ITAT Bar Association for the term 2011-12.

The members of the ITAT Bar Association include Advocates, Chartered Accountants and Tax Practitioners practising before the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal. It has 450 members as on 12-7-2012.

The ITAT Bar Association has one of the best equipped tax law libraries in Mumbai. More than 25 magazines and journals covering tax and allied subjects are available. The journals subscribed include virtually every journal in the taxation field published in India as well as international tax journals, and journals of special interest areas such as company law, excise, sales tax and service tax as well as also AIR and SCC journals to enable Members to keep abreast of the law in other non-tax areas. The ITAT Bar Association Library is considered as one of the finest libraries in India in the field of taxation, both domestic and international. The ITAT Bar Association has a website www.itatonline.org to enable its members and guests to access latest news and judgments, cause lists, etc. It has a lively interactive forum where Members can post queries which are discussed and answered. For the benefit of members our research team is preparing a digest of important case laws monthly. We are pleased to state that www.itatonline.org has more than 19,000 subscribers. The library is fully air-conditioned. The library was initially funded by Shri Chunilal Karsandas, a past member and has been subsequently supported by the D. M. Harish Foundation. A magnanimous contribution from Shri S. E. Dastur, Past President of ITAT Bar Association, enabled the ITAT Bar Association to set up a separate section on International Law Library dedicated to late Shri R. J. Kolah. Shri Dinesh Vyas Past President of ITAT Bar Association has also contributed a magnanimous contribution to renovate the Library.

The ITAT Bar Association plays an active role in matters of vital importance to the Tribunal. It makes representations to concerned authorities from time to time. The Income Tax Appellate Tribunal has always enjoyed judicial independence. When there was a threat of interference from the Executive in the administration of justice, the ITAT Bar Association filed a public interest petition before the Bombay High Court. The judgment of the Supreme Court in ITAT v. V. K. Agarwal (1999) 235 ITR 175 (SC) dealt with the scope of administrative supervision by the Ministry of Law over the functioning of the ITAT. On another occasion, there was a move to shift the headquarters of the ITAT to Delhi. It was mainly due to the representations and efforts of the ITAT Bar Association that the Govt. was persuaded against taking this step and the headquarters continued in Mumbai. Again, when there was a proposal to constitute 5 additional Benches of Income Tax Appellate Tribunal at Navi Mumbai, it was the ITAT Bar Association that strongly opposed the move and convinced the Govt. that setting up additional Benches at Navi Mumbai was not in the interest of the tax payers or the Govt. This would not have been possible but for the PIL filed by the ITAT Bar Association before the Bombay High Court. It is of significance that not only did the Govt. accept this suggestion but allotted additional space previously occupied by the All India Radio to the Income Tax Appellate Tribunal so that the additional Benches now function alongside the then existing five Benches on the same floor.

For the development of the Tax Bar, the ITAT Bar Association since 2004 in association with All India Federation of Tax Practitioners and Government Law College have started the "Nani Palkhivala Memorial National Tax Moot Court Competition" and "Research in Tax Law" under the banner of "Palkhivala Foundation" at Mumbai, the number of participants has increased over the years. Last year students from more than 35 leading law colleges of India participated in the competition and more than 300 Law colleges participated in the Research Paper Competition.

The ITAT Bar Association has a Library Committee, Publication and Research Committee and Representation Committee.

The members of the ITAT Bar Association have adopted a code of ethics. The Committee is headed by three eminent professionals.

The members of the ITAT Bar Association share a very healthy cordial relationship. The logo of ITAT Bar Association is "Justice be our Goal".

All India Federation of Tax Practitioners

All India Federation of Tax Practitioners is an apex body of tax practitioners associations and tax practitioners of India established on 11-11-1976, by the blessings of former Chief Justice of India, honourable Mr. Justice J.C. Shah and distinguished jurist Mr. N. A. Palkhivala. It has 119 leading associations and 5250 individual members from 26 States and 4 Union Territories. Most of leading senior advocates, advocates and chartered accountants who are practicing on direct and indirect taxes from different parts of our country, are members of the Federation. Many members of the Federation have been elevated to be Judges of the High Courts, Supreme Court and appointed as members of Income Tax Appellate Tribunal.

One of the object of the Federation is to provide an effective forum for the discussion of matters pertaining to tax laws, other laws, accountancy and their administration, for the collection, dissemination of information relating thereto, for the development of better understanding and co-operation amongst the members, tax administration, tax payers and all others concerned and to strive and work for independence of Quasi-Judicial Authorities, Appellate Authorities, the Settlement Commissions, Tribunals, Authority for Advance Ruling, Courts, or other similar Authorities.

Federations' eminent Past Presidents are Late Shri N. C. Mehta, Mumbai (1978-83), Shri B. C. Joshi, Advocate, Mumbai (1984-90), Late Shri L. M. Mahurkar, Nagpur (1991-93), Shri P. C. Joshi, Advocate, Mumbai (1994-96). Late Shri Sukumar Bhattacharya, Kolkata (1997-99), Shri N. M. Ranka, Sr. Advocate, Jaipur (2000-02), Dr. K. Shivaram, Advocate, Mumbai (2003-05) Late Shri V. Ramachandran, Sr advocate, Chennai (2006 & 07), Shri Bharatji Agrawal, Sr. Advocate, Allahabad (2008 & 09) and Shri M. L. Patodi, Advocate, Kota (2010 & 2011). Mr. S. K. Podar advocate from Ranchi has been elected as President for the term 2012-13.

The Federation has various sub-committees, such as Journal Committee, Law & Representation Committee (Direct & Indirect Taxes), Palkhivala Foundation and Research Committee, Times Committee, Membership development, etc.

The Federation publishes a monthly Journal "AIFTP Journal" covering the latest reported & unreported decisions of the Supreme Court, High Courts and Income Tax Appellate Tribunals including the articles, opinions and latest developments on direct and indirect taxes by experts in the field. The unique feature is that every quarter, it publishes the gist of important case laws published in 33 Tax Magazines from all over the country. The Federation publishes a monthly Newsletter called AIFTP TIMES which is sent to all the members. The Federations' website at www.aiftponline.org is an informative source for the members. Federation has its library at Mahalaxmi Income-tax office. The Federation has been making Representations to focus the grievances of trade, industry and professionals. It regularly sends Pre and Post Budget Memorandums. Many of the suggestions and the recommendations are accepted. The Kar Vivad Samadhan Scheme, 1998 was suggested by our Federation. In order to get tax laws simplified and rationalised, it has filed more than 20 Writ Petitions in public interest. Representations are made to the Central and State Governments and higher tax administration for redressal of grievances and simplification of tax laws. It regularly publishes books in simple language and question answer format at a low cost. It has published more than 33 books.

The Federation jointly with the Association Members organize National Seminars, Conferences and Conventions in various parts of the Country to update its members on all aspects of Direct and Indirect Taxation.

A unique feature of the Federation is that the faculties, chairman, trustees, office bearers and members of the National Executive and Zonal Committees pay a registration fee and bear their own travel and stay expenses. They serve with dedication, devotion and generously contribute to 'BUILD THE NATION'. Since 1994, the Federation has installed 'RANKA BEST TAX SEMINAR' competition. Since 2005, The Ranka Charitable Trust has installed Ranka Best Zone Chairman award. National Convention is held every second year. Many Chief Justices of India, Judges of the Supreme Court and High Courts have inaugurated the conferences, appreciated and applauded efforts and activities of the Federation. As per the request of the Federation, Government of India has released Commemorative Postage Stamp in Memory of Shri N. A. Palkhivala on 16th January, 2004. The then Hon'ble Prime Minister of India, Shri Atal Bihari Vajpayee released the stamp at Mumbai.

For the development of the Tax Bar Federation since 2004 in association with ITAT Bar Association and Government Law College have started the "Nani Palkhivala Memorial National Tax Moot Court Competition" and "Research in Tax Laws" in the banner of "Palkhivala Foundation" at Mumbai, wherein every year students from more than 35 leading law colleges of India are participating in the competition and more than 300 Law Colleges are participating in the Research Competition. All India Federation of Tax Practitioners in association with Asia Oceania Tax Consultants Association (AOTCA) has organized the First International Tax Conference at Mumbai from 19th to 21st November, 2009, representing 14 countries wherein 105 delegates enrolled, including 55 foreign delegates. Federation has voluntarily adopted the code of ethics in its Constitution for its members. Ethics are a way of life. The Federation is affiliated to the Asia Oceania Tax Consultants Association, Japan. The Federation has organised a successful International Study Tour in the month of May 2004 and May 2007.

Today, the Federation is considered a national integration of tax professionals of India. The Federation is making an honest attempt to develop a strong Tax Bar for our country.

Digest -2003-2011

Income-tax Act, 1961

PRELIMINARY

Section 2 : Definitions

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Sale of rubber scrap – Industrial activity

Sale of scrap rubber which is generated in course of extraction of rubber latex from trees cannot be brought to Income tax by applying Rule 7A because scrap is generated in the course of taking yield which is purely an agricultural operation. However, income from scrap generated in industrial activity of processing latex in to products referred to in Rule 7A(1) has to be brought to income tax under rule 7A.

CIT .v. State Farming Corporation of Kerala (2011) 199 Taxman 371 / 244 CTR 560 / 58 DTR 104 (Ker.)(HC)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Hybrid seeds – Human labour – Sale [S. 10(1)]

Irrespective of nature of produce or product of land, whatever is grown on land with assistance of human labour and effort and whatever does not grow wild or spontaneously on soil without human labour and effort would be an agricultural product and process of producing it would be 'agriculture' within the meaning of expression in section 2(1A), therefore seeds are agricultural product and sale of seeds can be agricultural income. However, where the assessee company was interested only to have healthy foundation seeds grown for process of converting same as certified seeds, income arising to assessee by sale of hybrid seeds could not be treated as agricultural income for purpose of exemption under section 10(1). (A.Ys. 1998-99 to 2004-05).

CIT v. Namdhari Seeds (P) Ltd. (2011) 203 Taxman 565 / 64 DTR 153 / 341 ITR 342 (Karn.)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Trees waste land – Compensation

In the absence of any evidence of any agricultural operations having been carried out on the waste lands, the enhanced compensation received by the assessee for compulsory acquisition of the said waste lands and trees by the State Government cannot be treated as agricultural income. (A.Y. 1989-90)

Sajjansinh N. Chauhab v. ITO (2010) 38 DTR 155 / 232 CTR 268 (Guj.)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Income derived – Growing and maintaining trees

Income derived by the assessee under a scheme where a land earmarked by the assessee was given to another company for growing and maintaining the trees, was not the income derived from agriculture or agricultural operation. (A.Ys. 1993-94, 1994-95)

Papaya Farms (P) Ltd. v. Dy. CIT (2010) 325 ITR 60 / 236 CTR 311 / 46 DTR 367 (Mad.)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Undisclosed income – Sugarcane

Where there is material to show that assessees were holding lands in which sugarcane was raised and supplied to sugar industries, for which payment was made to the assessees by cheques, no part of income disclosed by the assessees could be treated as their undisclosed income holding it to be non agricultural income.

ACIT v. C. Subba Reddy (2005) Vol. I Tax L.R. 373 (Mad.)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Nursery – Subsequent operations

Tribunal set aside the matter to the Assessing Officer to examine how the assessee could be said to be carrying on agricultural operation in the primary sense, i.e. tilling of the land, sowing of seeds and planting and doing similar other operations on the land. After examining that aspect, the Assessing officer had to examine the subsequent operations carried out by the assessee. Mere performing of the subsequent operations would not make the assessee's activity an agricultural activity. The High court upheld the order of Tribunal. (A.Ys. 1996-97 to 1998-99)

Jugal Kishore Arora v. Dy. CIT (2004) 269 ITR 133 / 141 Taxman 187 / 192 CTR 174 (All.)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Fallow land – Crops

Assessee's land which was used for growing Crops & treated as agricultural Land in Wealth Tax assessments for several years & also classified as such could not be treated non-agricultural mainly for the land lying fallow in the relevant years or being in locality where development had taken place. (A.Ys. 1988-89 to 1990-91)

CIT v. D. RM. M. SP. SV A. Annamalai Chettiar (2004) 192 CTR 288 / (2005) 273 ITR 404 (Mad.) (High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Exemptions – Jagir income

Jagir income is agricultural income. (A.Ys. 1970-71, 1971-72)

CIT v. Satinder Singh (2003) 127 Taxman 554 (Delhi)(High Court) – followed CIT v. Satinder Singh (2001) 249 ITR 183 (Delhi)(High Court)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Agricultural land – On money

Surplus consideration on sale of agricultural land always partakes the character of agricultural Income even though surplus consideration is tainted with expression “on money” as true colour of that “on money” is Agricultural Income. (A.Y. 1999-2000)
ITO v. Koshy George (Dr.) (2010) 190 Taxman 4 (Mag.)(Cochin)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Sale of hybrid seeds

Assessee is engaged in research, production, and sale of basic seeds and hybrid seeds by following method of contract farming in its own as well as leasehold land. When basic as well as secondary agricultural operations are carried on by assessee, entire income is agricultural income. (A.Y. 2002-03)
Advanta India Ltd v. Dy. CIT (2010) 5 ITR 57 (Bang.)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Seeds – Crops

Seeds or crops produced at first level by assessee would constitute agricultural income as per rule 7(I)(a).
Pioneer Overseas Corporation v. Dy. CIT (2010) 35 SOT 467 / 127 TTJ 640 / 34 DTR 10 (Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Tea plantation

Income generated from tea plantation taken on lease, cannot ceased to be an Agricultural Income, on ground that basic operations had already been carried out in agricultural land by the lessor. That cultivation charges and harvesting charges incurred by assessee along with other basic operations cannot be said as towards secondary operation, so as to treat the income as Non-agricultural Income. (A.Y. 2002-03)
Wilson & Co. Ltd. v. ACIT (2009) 184 Taxman 79 / 121 TTJ 258 / (2008) 16 DTR 428 (Chennai)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Income from fishing

Income derived from fishing over land covered by water and which is not used for any agricultural purpose cannot be treated as agricultural income inasmuch as fish cannot be treated as produce of the land. (A.Y. 2002-03)
Karra Jayabhyarathi v. ITO (2006) 100 TTJ 257 / (2005) 96 ITD 414 (Hyd.)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Undisclosed income

Reasonable agricultural income shown by the assessee could not be treated as income from undisclosed sources merely because assessee has shown agricultural income for the first time and the land records show a different produce than what was sold by assessee. (A.Y. 2001-02)
Bhanuben Chimanlal Malavia (Smt.) v. ITO (2006) 100 TTJ 337 (Rajkot)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Growing of grass

Income derived by growing special quality of grass required for creating golf course, is agricultural income. (A.Y. 1997-98)

ACIT v. P.Z. Estate (P.) Ltd. (2005) 2 SOT 563 (Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Lessee did not carry on agricultural operation

Where assessee gave its agricultural land on lease to a party for its business operations and lessee did not carry out any agricultural operations on land, income derived by assessee from lease was not an agricultural income and was rightly treated as income from other sources. (A.Ys. 1998-99, 2000-01)

Varinder Dass v. ITO (2005) 3 SOT 1 / 93 TTJ 201 (Chd.)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Sale of Seeds

Income arising from use of Land for agricultural purpose will be exempt from Tax. It was held that Income from sale of seeds grown by assessee company based on agricultural research could not be treated as Agricultural Income. (A.Y. 1996-97)

Proagro Seeds Co. Ltd. v. Jt. CIT (2003) / 126 Taxman 37 (Mag.)(Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(1A) : Definitions – Agricultural income – Nursery

Income from Nursery would be exempt, if it is proved that basic Agricultural operations on Land were carried out. Thus Income earned from such Nursery even if meant for business would amount to agricultural Income. (A.Y. 1998-99)

Sudisha Farm Nursery v. ITO (2003) 81 TTJ 714 / (2004) 88 ITD 638 (Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(1B) : Definitions – Amalgamation – Subsidiary – Tax avoidance

As the scheme has been sanctioned by High Court it cannot be held that there was motive to avoid tax. Further the shares were issued to outside shareholders by assessee company in terms of scheme sanctioned by High Court and the allotment of shares was done on the basis of valuation report submitted by an independent valuer. (A.Y. 2004-2005)

ACIT v. TVS Motors Co. Ltd. (2010) 36 DTR 89 / (2011) 128 ITD 47 / 137 TTJ 220 (Chennai)(Trib.)

S. 2(7A) : Definitions – Assessing officer – Addl. CIT Jurisdiction [S. 120(4)]

The Addl. CIT cannot exercise the authority of Assessing Officer to make assessment of income, and assessment made by such Addl. CIT is liable to be quashed. Law amended w.e.f. 1-6-1996 by Finance Act, 2007. (A.Y. 1999-2000)

Bindal Apparels Ltd. v. ACIT, 104 TTJ 950 / 8 SOT 498 (Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(11) : Definitions – Block of assets – Monies payable – Fair market value [S. 43(6)(c)]

When an asset is sold, the block of assets stands reduced only by monies payable on account of sale of the asset and not by the fair market value of the asset sold.

Dy. CIT v. Cable Corporation of India Ltd. ITA No. 5592/Mum/2002 dt. 29-10-2009 Bench E/392 (2010) 41B BCAJ (Jan)(Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 2(11) : Definitions – Block of assets – Capital gains [S. 32(1)(iii), 50]

Building owned by the assessee, and also building deemed to be owned by assessee as per Explan. 1 to section 32(1) in respect of which same rate of depreciation is prescribed has to be taken together for determining WDV of block of assets. No loss on account of any shortfall between the individual WDV of building of deemed ownership and any amount realised in respect thereof can be allowed as a capital loss under section 50 or as business deduction under section 32(1)(iii). (A.Y. 2004-05)

Anand and Anand v. ACIT (2009) 29 DTR 489 / 125 TTJ 794 / 33 SOT 148 / (2010) 1 ITR 788 (Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(11) : Definitions – Block of assets – Prescribed rate – Rules – Rate of depreciation

[S. 32(1)(iii)]

Since rate of depreciation is prescribed in substantive provisions of Act, word 'prescribed' appearing in definition of 'block of asset' under section 2(11) cannot be construed only to mean rate of depreciation as prescribed under Income Tax Rules, 1962.

Ulka Advertising P. Ltd. v. Dy. CIT (2005) 94 ITD 282 (Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 2(13) : Definitions – Business – Adventure in nature of trade – Dividend stripping [S. 28(i)]

One of the relevant factors for determining whether the transaction was on "Capital" or "Investment" account or was a "business activity" or "an adventure in the nature of trade" is whether the assessee has carried on similar transaction in future years.

Anil Jain v. CIT (2007) 294 ITR 435 / 9 RC 581 / 164 Taxman 319 / 212 CTR 347 (SC)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Business – Adventure in nature of trade

Where investment was made in agricultural land within limits of town panchayats, and agricultural income was shown and declared year after year, though permission was sought to develop lands, no further action was taken for over 12 years till date of sale, and entire land was sold after its value appreciated, it would not become an adventure in the nature of trade.

ITO v. Chandar - HUF (2011) 47 SOT 17 (Chennai)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Agricultural land in India – Distance – Measurement

Measurement of distance for the purpose of deciding the character of land, whether agricultural or not, is to be done in terms of the approach by road and not by straight line distance on horizontal plane or as per crow's flight. (A.Y. 2001-02)

CIT v. Satinder Pal Singh (2010) 188 Taxman 54 / 229 CTR 82 / 33 DTR 281 (P&H)(High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Land [S. 45]

Where the assessee had neither any intention to sell the purchased land at a profit nor the assessee was a regular dealer in real estate, piecemeal sale of land by the assessee which was purchased long ago would constitute disposal of 'capital asset' and not an 'adventure in the nature of trade' and surplus thereof was taxable under the head capital gains.

CIT v. Sohan Khan (2008) 7 DTR 361 / 304 ITR 194 (Raj.)(High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Stock [S. 45]

Stock left with the assessee on sale of the plant and machinery by the creditors in satisfaction of their dues would not constitute a capital asset and accordingly, the profit arising out of sale of such stock could not be taxed as capital gain.

CIT v. Poddar Industrial Corporation (2008) 6 DTR 340 (All.)(High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Agricultural land – No agricultural income

Land which was shown as agricultural land in the revenue records and never sought to be used for non agricultural purposes by the assessee till it was sold has to be treated as agricultural land, even though no agricultural income was shown by the assessee from this land, and therefore, no capital gain was taxable on the sale of the said land.

CIT v. Debbie Alemao (Smt.) (2010) 46 DTR 341 / (2011) 331 ITR 59 / 239 CTR 326 / 196 Taxman 230 (Bom.)(High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Ownership – Granting of sub-lease constitutes transfer [S. 45]

According to the definition of Capital Asset, "any kind of property" held by an assessee would come within the definition of Capital Asset. Therefore, it does not necessarily mean that the property which the assessee holds, must be his own.

The assessee took on lease an immovable property under a lease agreement dated 6.9.1985 for 22 years. The assessee sub-leased the said property by a Lease Deed dated 10-9-1985 for a period of 20 years. Now the question before the Assessing Officer was, whether transfer of leasehold rights in the land by the assessee in favour of the sub-lessee would amount to transfer of a capital asset at the hands of the assessee, and if so, the consideration paid by the sub-lessee to the assessee would partake the character of Capital Gains and be assessable to tax as such. The Assessing Officer held that as transfer and taxed it as Capital Gain.

On appeal to High Court by revenue, it was held that as per the Supreme Court Judgment in the case of Palshikar (R.K.) HUF v. ITO (1988) 172 ITR 311 (SC) the transfer by way of lease would amount to transfer of a capital asset and therefore tax is leviable as capital gains.

CIT v. Sujatha Jewellers (2007) 290 ITR 631 / 210 CTR 313 / 160 Taxman 183 (Mad.) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Cost of acquisition – Agricultural land [S. 45, 48]

Agriculture land acquired before 1st Jan., 1954, agricultural land became capital asset only on amendment of section 2(14) w.e.f. 28th Feb., 1970 and therefore, cost of acquisition of agricultural land as on 28th Feb., 1970, is to be taken for computation of capital gains and not as on 1st Jan., 1954.

CIT v. Gurcharan Singh (2007) 212 CTR 420 / 292 ITR 387 / 160 Taxman 211 (P&H) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Lease rights – Transfer

The assessee has taken a building on 99-year lease from her husband and executed a sub-lease against receipt of lump sum consideration as advance adjustable against future lease rentals for 97 years. The Court held that lease rights of the assessee in property constitute a capital asset and since such rights were held for less than 36 months the assessee was liable to pay short-term capital gains tax.

G. Seetha Kamraj v. CIT (2007) 165 Taxman 117 / 284 ITR 54 / (2006) 204 CTR 487 (AP) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Agricultural land – Municipal limits

Gains arising on transfer of land not situated within 8 kms. from the municipal limits, on which agricultural operation were carried on till the date of transfer are not exigible to capital gains tax.

CIT v. Sanjeeda Begam (Smt.) (2006) 154 Taxman 346 (All.) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Agricultural land – Rural area – Union Territory [S. 2(14)(iii)(a)]

Provisions of section 2(14) (iii)(a) are applicable to the rural areas of Union Territory of Delhi. Thus the land in rural areas of Union Territory of Delhi constitutes capital asset and is exigible to capital gain tax on its transfer.

CIT v. Ranjit Singh (2004) 265 ITR 680 / 136 Taxman 440 (Delhi) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Agricultural land – Within municipality having a population of more than 10000

Agricultural land in area within municipality having a population of more than 10000, is a capital asset, hence capital gain arising on transfer of agricultural lands belonging to the assessee in village Nagal Dewat, Delhi was chargeable to tax.

CIT v. Shri Chand (2004) 141 Taxman 57 (Delhi) (High Court)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Agricultural land – Payment of compensation on acquisition [S. 194LA]

Definition of “agricultural land” as given in section 2(14) cannot be imported for purpose of payment of compensation on acquisition of certain immovable property as per section 194LA. (A.Y. 2005-06).

ITO v. Special land Acquisition Officer (2011) 46 SOT 458 (Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Town panchayat

A Town Panchayat is notified for urban agglomeration, but it is not a municipality. Agricultural lands falling within said town panchayat would not fall within municipality, and hence is not a capital asset as per the definition under section 2(14)(iii). (A.Y. 2006-07)

ITO v. Chander-HUF (2011) 47 SOT 17 (Chennai)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Agricultural land – Outside municipal limits [S. 45]

The agricultural land, which was 2.5 kms. away from the outer limits of the municipal limits did not come within the purview of section 2(14)(iii) either under sub clause (a) or (b). Hence, the same could not be considered as capital asset. (A. Y. 2007-08).

Dy. CIT v. Arjit Mitra (2011) 48 SOT 544 (Kol.)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Capital gains – Agricultural land – Beyond 5 Kms. municipal limits – Not notified [S. 45]

Where land was not located in area falling within 5 Kms. of local municipal limit as notified by Central Government, it was to be regarded as an agricultural land and thus capital gains arising on its sale was not liable to tax. Tehsildhar's statement is not relevant. (A. Y. 2003-04).

ITO v. Gahlot Farmas (P) Ltd. (2011) 48 SOT 303 / 138 TTJ 13 (UO)(Delhi)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Transfer – Capital gains – Forfeiture of Deposit [S. 2(47)]

Assessee entered in to an agreement with power of attorney holder of land owners and paid certain amount as advance. Sale deed was required to be executed within six months from the date of agreement. As the assessee could not manage funds within the prescribed period, agreement was cancelled and amount paid by assessee was forfeited. Assessee claimed that amount forfeited represented short term capital loss, which could be set off against long-term capital gains. The Tribunal held that essential requirement for charging capital gains (or allowing capital loss) is that a transfer of capital asset should be effected in the relevant previous year. In the instant case, by paying advance money assessee did not get any right which could be termed as capital asset within meaning of section 2(14), and which was transferred within the meaning of section 2(47), therefore the assessee's claim was not allowable.

Dinesh Babulal Thakkar v. ACIT (2010) 39 SOT 332 (Ahd.)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Membership card of stock exchange

Membership card of a stock exchange can be construed as capital asset within the meaning of section 2(14) and therefore, consideration received on transfer is exigible for capital gains tax.

R. M. Valliappan v. ACIT (2006) 103 ITD 63 / 287 ITR(AT) 203 / 104 TTJ 756 (SB)(Chennai)(Trib.)

S. 2(14) : Definitions – Capital asset – Technology information – Dossier

Technology information in the form of a dossier is a capital asset.

Pfizer Corporation, in Re (2004) 271 ITR 101 / 141 Taxman 642 / 192 CTR 193 (AAR)

S. 2(14)(iii) : Definitions – Capital asset – Agricultural land – Capital gains [S. 54B]

Reports of the Tahsildar having certified that the assessee's land was 8 kms away from the municipal limits, the land constituted agricultural land, entitled to exemption under section 54B.

S. 2(15) : Definitions – Charitable purpose – Development and maintenance of minor Ports – Registration [S. 12A]

The assessee was constituted for the purpose of development and maintenance of minor ports in the State of Gujarat with no profit motive. The Supreme Court held that the expression "any other object of general public utility" is of a wide connotation and includes development and maintenance of ports. The expression would prima facie include all objects which promote welfare of the general public. If the primary purpose and the predominant object are to promote the welfare of the general public the purpose would be a Charitable purpose, therefore, entitled to registration under section 12A.

S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Loans or advances – Share holder

In order that the first part of cl.(e) of section 2(22) is attracted, the payment by a company has to be by way of an advance or loan. The advance or loan has to be made, as the case may be either to a shareholder, being a beneficial owner holding not less than ten percent of the voting power or to any concern in which such a share holder is a member or a partner and in which he has a substantial interest. Amount received from a company having been misappropriated by shareholder, there was no loan or advance. S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Loans or advance – Share holder

Where assessee is not a shareholder of the paying company, the dividend is not assessable in its hands. S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Shares held in the name of partners of the firm – For purpose of S. 2(22)(e) firm is considered as “shareholder”

It was held that for section 2(22)(e), a firm has to be treated as the “shareholder” even though it is not the “registered shareholder”. The first limb of section 2(22)(e) is attracted if the payment is made by a company by way of advance or loan “to a shareholder, being a person who is the beneficial owner of shares”. While it is correct that the person to whom the payment is made should not only be a registered shareholder but a beneficial share holder, the argument that a firm cannot be treated as a “shareholder” only because the shares are held in the names of its partners is not acceptable. If this contention is accepted, in no case a partnership firm can come within the mischief of section 2(22)(e) because the shares would always be held in the names of the partners and never in the name of the firm. This would frustrate the object of section 2(22)(e) and lead to absurd results.

Advance given by company to assessee shareholder by way of compensation for keeping his property as mortgage on behalf of company to reap benefit of loan could not be treated as deemed dividend within the meaning of section 2(22)(e). Phrase ‘by way of advance or loan’ appearing in section 2(22)(e) must be construed to mean those advances or loans which a shareholder enjoys simply on account of being a person who is beneficial owner of shareholding not less than 10 percent of voting power, but if such loan or advance is given to such share holder as a consequence of any further consideration received by the company from such a share holder, such advances or loan cannot be treated to be deemed dividend with in the meaning of section 2(22)(e). S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Loan to share holder – Applicable only to loans given in the year – Section 2(22)(e) not applicable if lending is not “trivial” part of business

Section 2(22)(e) covers only the amount received during the previous year by way of loans / advances and not amounts received in an earlier year. The second condition, the expression "substantial part" does not connote an idea of being the "major part" or the part that constitutes majority of the whole. ### S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Trade advance

The word 'advance' is used in company of the word 'loan' and hence has to be read in conjunction with the word 'loan' by applying the rule of 'noscitur a sociis'. Therefore the word 'advance' can only mean such advance which carries with it an obligation of repayment. S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Deposits

Huge deposits in the imprest account held by a shareholder/director without any utilization of those funds during the year is indicative of the fact that the amount given by the company to the shareholder/director towards the so-called imprest account was in fact a short – term loan and, therefore, the same is assessable as deemed dividend under section 2(22)(e). S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Bonus redeemable preference shares whether deemed dividend

Applicant allotted bonus redeemable preference shares to existing equity shareholders. AAR observed that not only there has to be a distribution by the company of accumulated profits, but such distribution must entail the release of assets by the company to the share holders; mere issue of redeemable bonus preference shares would not tantamount to payment of dividends unless these shares are redeemed by the Company. Accordingly it was held that it can not be considered as deemed dividend, but would be taxable at the time of redemption of preference shares.

S. 2(22)(e) : Definitions – Dividend – Deemed dividend – Interest bearing loan from resident to non-resident group company

Resident company intends to extend interest bearing loan to non-resident group company. Revenue's contention was that the proposed loan would be deemed dividend based on the shareholding pattern. AAR observed that for a loan to be treated as deemed dividend, it must be directly given by the company to its shareholder or such shareholder must have beneficial interest in the concern that is the recipient of the loan; but in the instant case, recipient is not a registered shareholder of lending company; also lending company's shareholder is neither a member nor a partner and does not have substantial interest in recipient as per S. 2(32), therefore it ruled that loan is not deemed dividend to the extent of

"accumulated profits". Section 2(22)(e) is a deeming provision and it is well settled that it has to be construed strictly and to attract sub clause (e) the share holder must be a registered share holder.

S. 2(24)(iv) : Definitions – Income – Benefit or perquisite – Shares – “Owner” of Demat shares in depository’s books, Mere “pledgee”, – No Benefit or perquisite

With respect to dematerialized shares, though section 12 of the DP Act provides for the manner of creating a pledge, this is not the only method. Dematerialized shares continue to be “goods” and the law laid down in the Companies Act and the Sale of Goods Act for deciding whether a sale of shares has taken place or not will continue to govern;

Though a person is shown as the beneficial owner in the register of a depository participant, this is not conclusive and he can show that he is not the beneficial owner of shares but only holds the shares as a Pawnee and as security for repayment of debts due by the real beneficial owner;

As a Pawnee / pledgee, the assessee does not have absolute rights over the shares. He could sell the security in a manner contemplated by law. In case the proceeds were greater than the amount due to him, he had to pay the surplus to the pawnor. Consequently, there was no “benefit” assessable under section 2(24)(iv). (A.Y. 2004-05)

S. 2(42A) : Definitions – Short-term capital asset – Capital Gains – Long Term or Short Term – Flat allotted under self finance scheme – DDA – Reinvestment [S. 2(29A), 45, 54]

Under section 2(29A), long term capital asset is one which is not a short term capital asset. According to section 2(42A) short term capital asset at the relevant time means a capital asset held by an assessee for not more than thirty six months immediately preceding the date of its transfer. A conjoint reading of these provisions leads to one conclusion that a capital asset which is held by the assessee for 36 months would be termed as a long term capital asset and any gain arising on account of sale thereof would constitute long term capital gain.

Section 3 : "Previous year" defined

S. 3 : Previous year – Setting up of business – Commencement of business

The date of setting up of business and date of its commencement could be two separate dates. Section 3(1) of the Act, as it stood at the relevant time and even today, has reference to the date of setting up the business as the starting point of the previous year in case of newly set up business. Expenses incurred such as travelling, conveyance, rent, telephone, brokerage, maintenance and sales promotion etc after setting up business is allowable as business expenditure.

S. 3(1)(b) : Previous Year – Income – Separate source of income

Until 31st Dec 1981, S. Enterprises was an "AOP" and thereafter, it became a proprietary concern of the assessee w.e.f. 1st Jan., 1982, and therefore, section 3(1)(b) and not section 3(1)(f) was applicable and the Tribunal was not justified in holding that remuneration received by assessee from CTC was assessable in the A.Y. 1982-83, previous year ended on 27th Oct., 1981. Income tax liability crystallized on the last day of the previous year, therefore, new source of income could be ascertained end of previous year. (A.Ys. 1982-83, 1983-84)

CHAPTER II BASIS OF CHARGE

Section 4 : Charge of Income-tax

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Capital or revenue – Sales tax subsidy

The assessee received sales-tax incentive for setting up a new industrial undertaking in Patalganga. The assessee claimed that the said subsidy was a capital receipt. The Special Bench (Dy. CIT v Reliance Industries Ltd. (2004) 88 ITD 273) upheld the assessee's claim. On appeal by the department (for a subsequent year), the Bombay High Court held that as a finding had been recorded by the Special Bench that the object of the subsidy was to encourage the setting up of industries in the backward area by generating employment therein, by applying the "purposive test" in CIT v. Ponni Sugars and Chemicals Ltd. (2008) 306 ITR 392 (SC), the subsidy was a capital receipt. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the High Court ought not to have dismissed the appeals. Accordingly, the following question was referred back to the High Court for its consideration "Whether on the facts and circumstances of the case and in law the Hon'ble Tribunal was right in holding that sales tax incentive is a Capital Receipt?". (A.Y. 1997-98)

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Income or capital – Liquidated damages – Purchase of additional cement plant

The supplier failed to supply the machinery within the stipulated time and the assessee received ₹ 8,50,000/- from the supplier by way of liquidated damages. The Department sought to assess the amount to Income Tax. The appellate Tribunal held that the amount was a capital receipt. The High Court answered the issue in favour of assessee. On appeal to the Supreme Court, held, affirming the decision of the High Court, that the damages to the assessee were directly linked with the procurement of a capital asset, viz. the cement plant. The amount received by the assessee towards compensation for sterilization of the profit-earning source, not in the ordinary course of business, was capital receipt in the hands of assessee. #### S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Waiver of interest – Mercantile system of accounting

Where the assessee entered into an agreement for transfer of its industrial undertaking under which the buyer agreed to pay to it interest on the unpaid consideration w.e.f. 1-3-1977 and subsequently on 30-6-1978 the parties agreed to defer the date of commencement for payment of interest to 1-7-1979 and the question arose whether the interest foregone by the assessee could be assessed for the A.Ys. 1979-80 and 1980-81 under the accrual system of accounting. The Court held that;

- (a) As regards A.Y. 1979-80, the interest had already accrued and could not be wiped out by the subsequent agreement. The waiver could not have retrospective effect.
- (b) As regards A.Y. 1980-81, there was full scope to the assessee to defer the interest and as this was done before accrual, the interest was not chargeable to tax. (A.Y. 1980-81)

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Deposit non-refundable – Chief Minister's Relief Fund – Cane Development Fund – Sugar manufacturing Co-operative society

Considering the bye-laws as a whole, it was difficult to hold that either the assessee or the depositor would exercise complete dominion over the deposited amounts. Thus the non refundable deposits of members could not be treated as income of the assessee-society. Refundable deposits clearly liable to be excluded from the assessee's taxable income. Amount collected on account of the Chief Minister's Relief fund, etc., should not be treated as income of the assessee. The amount collected as Cane Development Fund shall be treated as income of the assessee. (A.Ys. 1984-85 to 1988-89)

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Capital or revenue – Share capital in foreign country – Gains due to fluctuation in foreign exchange – Capital receipt

The assessee is a multiproduct company, had issued equity shares overseas by way of global depository receipts in US dollars, which was to be repatriated into the country as and when required for end uses as approved by the Ministry of Finance and Industry. It was intimated to the Government of India, that the share capital so raised abroad, 79% of which would be used to acquire assets and 21% for general corporate use. The balance amount not utilised were kept in fixed deposits in the UK and the same was reflected in the balance sheet at the exchange rate prevailing on March 31st The assessee for the relevant year had accounted in its balance sheet, the gains arising from exchange rate fluctuation of foreign currency. The Assessing Officer treated this entire foreign gain on exchange rate fluctuation as revenue receipt. On appeal to the High Court by the department the High Court while dismissing the appeal held that the relevant consideration would be to see the source of funds held and not the utilizations of the funds. The High Court held that even in cases where money is raised in India, the money thus collected as share capital would be treated as capital receipt, and merely because part of the share capital was used for working capital, the same could not be treated as revenue receipt. #### S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Income shown in the return [S. 10(13)(ii), 264]

The assessee filed return for the A.Ys. 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1993-94 including the annuity received on superannuation as income. The assessee filed application under section 264 seeking exemption under section 10[13][ii] on the said annuities. The same was rejected as the assessee himself has offered the same for tax. The Hon'ble court, on a writ petition under Article 226 of the Constitution, observed that Article 265 of the Constitution mandates that no person shall be taxed without the authority of law. Since in the present case there is no authority to tax annuities received by the petitioner, we consider it appropriate to exercise our extraordinary power to correct the injustice. #### S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Diversion by overriding title – Application

Assessee had availed various facilities from Madurai Bank over years, repayment of which was guaranteed by way of charge on properties of assessee. As assessee failed to pay dues, bank filed a civil suit. Subsequently, out of Court settlement was reached at an amount of ` 160 lakhs. Vide Government resolution dt. 14-12-1994 and 19-7-1995, NSSK was permitted to buy spares, plant and machinery of assessee. It was to pay, on behalf of assessee a sum of ` 160 lakhs to Madurai Bank towards settlement of amount due. The assessee claimed that as NSSK directly paid Madurai Bank it should be excluded from the sale consideration as that never became the income of the assessee as it stood diverted by overriding title and hence, should be ignored for the purpose of calculating capital gain. The Tribunal held that payment to bank is only application of income not a charge on income. The payment to bank and sale consideration of its assets are entirely two distinct transactions having no relation with each other except for the fact that there was a charge by bank on assets. Hence, amount was not deductible from sale consideration. (A. Y. 1996-97)

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Court decree – Capital receipt – Income from other sources – Easement [S. 56]

In year 2004, the assessee had purchased certain land. "P" a public company of developers, had trespassed assessee's property by using a private road to reach their land located on the said property. To get the encroached portion retrieved, the assessee filed civil suit for restraining that company's entry on assessee's land. As per the Court decree by way of compromise between parties, the assessee permitted the use of private road enabling "P" to reach its property and in turn "P" paid certain amount to assessee. The assessee treated the said receipt as capital receipt. The assessing officer treated the said receipt as rent and taxable as income from house property. Commissioner (Appeals), reversed the finding of Assessing Officer. The Tribunal held that there being no relationship of land lord and tenant, between parties, amount received by assessee was only a capital receipt could not be taxed under the Act being an intangible asset having no cost. The Tribunal also held that the said receipt cannot be taxed as income from other sources. (A.Y. 2007-08).

S. 4 : Charge of Income-tax – Income – Trade advance from foreign buyer – Cessation of liability

Assessee received advance of ` 9 crores from certain foreign buyers, however, he could not export within one year as stipulated by RBI vide its regulation, notification No. FEMA 23/2000-RB dt. 3-5-2000, and assessee periodically withdrew the amount and used for other business purpose. Assessing Officer treated the said receipt as income and made addition. On appeal CIT(A) deleted the addition. The Tribunal held that in the relevant year liability to pay was existing and foreign party's claim was still enforceable under the law. After getting the permission from RBI the assessee remitted the amount to the buyer through banking channel, therefore, there was no cessation of liability and the same cannot be treated as assessee's income, the order passed by the CIT(A) was upheld. #### S. 5 : Scope of total income – Income – Accrual – Accrued or arisen or received – Income from Sikkim State Lottery – Territorial operation – Validity [S. 4]

For the assessment year 1986-87, in case of resident assessee provisions of Income Tax Act, 1961 were attracted to income accrued or arisen or received in Sikkim though the Act was not extended to Sikkim during such year, and as such, income from Sikkim State Lottery was taxable under the Act. Provisions of sections 5 and 6 are to make reach of Income Tax Act, 1961, extra territorial, but a provision which has extra – territorial operation by itself is neither invalid nor ineffective. Assessee being a builder, had taken a slum rehabilitation project. Assessee had been allotted TDR in lieu of handing over possession of constructed transit building. Assessee has sold the TDR in two installments. Assessing Officer taxed the receipts of TDR as independent income. Assessee contended that as they are following project completion method as per AS. 7, income from project had to be computed in year of completion. The Tribunal directed the Assessing Officer to compute the income of project after taking into consideration entire expenditure and receipt from beginning of year including TDRs. In case the project was not found complete, Assessing Officer would set off TDR receipts against work in progress and no income would be assessed on account of TDR receipts separately. (A. Outright sale of Technology Information in form of a dossier by non-resident owner to another non-resident - Transfer takes place in Bangkok - Such know-how was earlier used for many years by Indian group company of the transferee under license that was now terminated prior to outright sale - Relying on judgments of various courts in prior cases, AAR ruled that transfer of technical information in the form of a dossier was transfer of a capital asset; hence situs of such capital asset was relevant; in this connection, AAR observed that the Indian company was only a licensee and original technical know-how was always available with the owner i.e. the applicant. Once the Indian company entered into an agreement for early termination of license, the technical know-how reverted back to the owner and there was extinguishment of right to manufacture for which consideration has been paid to Indian company. As a result no asset related to technical know-how was located in India either in tangible or intangible form after termination of license granted to Indian company and hence the situs of the technical information was not in India in any form after early termination of license – Hence ruled that receipts by applicant from above transaction is not chargeable to tax in India.

S. 5(2) : Scope of total income – Income – Accrual – Non-resident – Deduction at source [S. 195]

Payment of hire charges of vessels to non-resident by way of fish catch. As per section 5(2), total income of a non-resident includes all income from whatever source derived, received or deemed to be received in India, including the income which accrues, arises or is deemed to accrue or arise to the non-resident in India. In the instant case, assessee chartered two fishing vessels from a non-resident company. Charter fee was to be paid in terms of money i.e. USD 600,000 per vessel per annum “payable by way of 85% of gross earning from the fish sales”. Chartered vessels with the entire catch were brought to an Indian port, the catch were certified for human consumption, valued and 85% of the catch was given to the non-resident after customs and port clearance, as per the terms of the agreement. So long as the catch was not apportioned, the entire catch was the property of the assessee and not of the non-resident. It is only after the non-resident was given its share of 85% of the catch; it did come within its control. Thus, the non-resident effectively received the charter fee in India and this being the first receipt in the eyes of law, it is chargeable to tax. Once 85 % of the catch was received by the non-resident in India, in sum and substance, it amounted to receipt of value of money. Therefore, income earned by the non-resident was chargeable to tax under section 5(2) and assessee was liable to deduct tax under section 195 on the payment made to the non-resident and was liable to the tax deduction at source under section 195 of the Act. Assessee already employed and deputed abroad, his status could not be taken as resident on the ground that he came on a visit to India and therefore, the period of 60 days as mentioned in section 6(1)(c), should be extended to 182 days, by ignoring his subsequent visit to India after completing the deputation, outside India. The first day in series of a day is to be excluded if the word "from" is used and since for computing of the period, one has to necessarily, import the word "from" the first day is to be excluded and so computed. Assessee's stay in India did not exceed sixty days and therefore his status had to be taken as non-resident during the relevant year. (A.Y. 2005-06)

Employee, an Indian citizen commenced employment with British Gas India Pvt. Ltd. in Feb/March 2002 and w.e.f. July 2005, he was deputed to British Gas, UK for two years and accordingly was in India for less than 182 days in that financial year - Revenue contended that as he was in India for more than 60 days, he was resident as per S. 6(1)(c) and that explanation (a) was not applicable as he was already in employment with British Gas in India - AAR observed that a careful reading of explanation (a) would show that the requirement of the explanation is not leaving India for employment but it is leaving India for the purposes of employment outside India. For the purpose of the explanation an individual need not be an unemployed person who leaves India for employment outside India. Therefore, the fact that Mr. Gupta was already an employee at the time of leaving India is hardly material or relevant. For all these reasons, it held that Mr. Manish Gupta is not a resident in India in the financial year 2005-2006. (A.Y. 2006-07)

S. 6(6) : Residence in India – Not ordinarily resident – Amendment by Finance Act 2003 – Circular No. 7 of 2003 – Substantive in nature

Amendment of section 6(6) by Finance Act 2003, w.e.f. 1st April 2004, is substantive in nature and cannot be given retrospective effect, since assessee was not a resident in three out of ten previous years preceding the A.Ys. 1998-99 and 1999-2000, he has to be treated as "resident but not ordinarily resident" in the said years as per the pre-amended section 6(6). Though Circular No. 7 of 2003 dt. 5th Sept., 2003, states that the amendment of section 6(6) by Finance Act, 2004 is clarificatory in nature, it cannot be held clarificatory, as residential status of an assessee determines his tax burden, said amendment has been made effective from 1st April, 2004 and can be held only as substantive in nature and cannot be given retrospective effect. The Tribunal noted that the provisions of section 6(6)(a) uses the term 'or' and not 'and' between the two conditions given therein. Accordingly, a person would be considered as RNOR if he complies with either of the two conditions given therein. It disagreed with the CIT(A) that in order to qualify as RNOR, the assessee should fulfil both the conditions. ### S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Sale of shares by Mauritius Co. – 100% USA parent. – Taxable if object is to acquire the Indian assets (S. 148, 163, 195)

- (i) The argument that s. 163 applies only with respect to income “deemed to accrue or arise” in India under section 9 and not to income “accruing or arising” is not acceptable. Pursuant to CIT v. Eli Lilly and Co. (India) P. Ltd. (2009) 312 ITR 225 (SC), the income accruing or arising in India to NCWS, USA on transfer of a capital asset situate in India, (shares of Idea Cellular) is deemed to accrue or arise in India to NCWS and can be assessed either in the hands of NCWS or in the hands of the payer as agent of the non-resident u/s 163;
- (ii) The argument that the Assessing Officer having issued a NOC under section 195(2) permitting Aditya Birla Nuvo to remit the sale proceeds without TDS could not recover the tax from the payer by treating it as agent is not acceptable because the said order was obtained by “suppressing material facts” relating to the circumstances in which the shares of Idea Cellular were issued in the name of AT&T Mauritius. As the payer had obtained the section 195(2) Certificate by making a representation which was incorrect to its knowledge, it could not claim that the section 195(2) Certificate was validly issued. Further, the proceedings under section 163 & 195 operate in different fields;
- (iii) The argument that once the Assessing Officer exercises his option under section 166 to assess the non-resident NCWS USA directly by issuing notice under section 148, the proceedings initiated against the payer must come to an end is not acceptable because there is nothing in the Act to suggest that the option to assess either the representative assessee or the non-resident must be exercised at the threshold itself and not at the end of the assessment proceedings. While ordinarily, the Assessing Officer must not proceed against the representative assessee once proceedings are initiated against the non-resident, in exceptional cases like the present one where complex issues are involved and the Assessing Officer is unable to make up his mind on account of suppression of material facts, it is open to the Assessing Officer to continue with the assessment proceedings against the representative assessee and the non-resident simultaneously till he decides to assess either of them;

- (iv) NCWS' argument that the section 148 notice is without jurisdiction is not acceptable because the prima facie belief of the Assessing Officer that the transaction was in fact a transaction for transfer of a capital asset situate in India (shares of Idea Cellular) had substance. It is open to NCWS to prove to the contrary by placing all material facts in the assessment proceedings;
- (v) Tata Industries' argument that no gains are taxable in India as the subject matter of sale were shares of AT&T Mauritius and not the shares of Idea Cellular is not acceptable because prima facie it appears that the transaction for sale of shares of AT&T Mauritius was a "colourable transaction" and was in fact for sale of the shares of Idea Cellular.

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Permanent establishment – DTAA – India-UK [S. 5(2), Art. 5]

Assessee was British Company. It supplied certain parts and equipments to Indian customers. RRIL was assessee's 100% subsidiary set up in India through which it carried out marketing and selling of goods to Indian customers. Assessing Officer after holding RRIL as PE of assessee, attributed 100% of profits earned from sale of goods to Indian customers to activities carried on in India. The Tribunal restricted such attribution to 35% holdings that profits attributed to manufacturing activity and research and development activities, i.e. 50 % and 15%, respectively had to be excluded. Assessee filed appeal before the High Court contending that net research and development expenses should also be reduced while computing operating profits; and that Tribunal had not considered objections and documents filed by it on aspect of PE properly and, therefore, matter should be remanded for reconsideration. Held that expenses on research and development were already taken care of when remuneration at rate of 35% was attributed to marketing activities in India on which global profits was apportioned. From the order of the Tribunal it was clear that while holding that RRIL constituted PE of assessee, it had undertaken critical analysis of material on record including objections and documents filed by the assessee and therefore there was no reason to remand the case back to the Tribunal. ### S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Fees for technical Services – DTAA – India-Canada [S. 115A, 234B, Art. 12(4)]

The assessee was a non-resident company engaged in the business of providing consultancy for infrastructure projects. It had entered into an agreement with the National Highway Authority of India and under the agreement the assessee was to provide technical drawings and reports to NHAI to enable it to use the technology for its infrastructure projects which were funded by the World Bank. Held, the fee received from NHAI was to be treated as "fees for included services" as per article 12(4) of the Double Taxation Avoidance Agreement between India and Canada and the tax was chargeable at 15%. The assessee was not liable to pay advance tax and therefore, interest under section 234B was not chargeable.

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue in India – No income deemed to arise even if revenue arises due to viewers in India – International Taxation

For income to be taxable under section 9(1)(i), the carrying of operations in India is a sine qua non. Merely because the footprint area included India and programmes were watched by Indian viewers, it did not mean that the assessee was carrying out business operations in India. The transponder used was in orbit and merely because its footprint was on India did not mean that the process had taken place in India. Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries 288 ITR 408 (SC) followed. Consideration for the offshore supply of equipment by the assessee, a Korean company, to an Indian company cannot be deemed to have accrued or arisen in India as the terms of the agreement stipulated transfer of title / property in the goods as soon as the goods were loaded on the ship at the port of shipment i.e. outside India, and there is no material to show that the accrual of income from this sale was attributable to any operations carried out in India or that the PE of the assessee in India had any role to play in the off shore supply of equipment. S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – “Office PE” or “Construction Site PE” – DTAA – India – Netherlands [Art. 5(3), 5 (2)]

The assessee had a “site” or “project” in India. Under Article 5(3) of the treaty, such a “site” or “project” is a PE only if it continues for a period of more than six months. As the assessee’s contract was completed in two months, there was no PE under Article 5(3). The argument that the Mumbai office was a PE under Article 5(2) is not acceptable because while Article 5(2) is a general provision, Article 5(3) is a specific provision which prevails over Article 5(2). S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Dependent agent permanent establishment – Fees for technical services – DTAA – India-Singapore [Art. 5(9)]

The assessee, a Singapore company, rendered repair and maintenance services and supplied spares to customers in India. While the income from repairs was offered to tax as “fees for technical services”, the income from supply of spares was claimed to be not taxable on the ground that it had accrued outside India. The Assessing Officer, CIT (A) and Tribunal took the view that the assessee had a “permanent establishment” on the basis that it had a “dependent agent” in India under Article 5(9) of the India-Singapore DTAA and that the income earned from supplying spare parts was taxable in India. On appeal to the High Court, held that (i) To constitute a “Dependent Agent Permanent Establishment” under Article 5(9) of the DTAA it has to be seen whether the activities of the agent are “devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of the assessee”. While the issues as to (a) whether the agent is prohibited from taking competitive products and (b) whether the assessee exercised extensive control over the agent were relevant, they are not conclusive. It is not correct to say that merely because the agent is prohibited from taking a competitive product means that it is not an agent of independent status. What has to be seen is whether the “activities” of the agent are devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of the assessee. If the assessee can show that it was not the sole client of the agent and that activities of the agent were not devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of the assessee, there may be no DAPE. The income earned by the agent from other clients and the extent of such income is very relevant to decide whether the criteria stipulated in Article 5(9) is satisfied or not. (Matter remanded for fresh consideration);

- (ii) While in principle it is correct that if a fair price is paid by the assessee to the agent for the activities of the assessee in India through the DAPE and the said price is taxed in India at the hands of the agent, then no question of taxing the assessee again would arise, this is subject to a Transfer Pricing Analysis being undertaken under section 92. The Transfer Pricing analysis to determine the “arms length” price has to be done by taking the “Functions, Assets used and Risk involved” (FAR). As this has not been done, the assessee’s argument on “arms length” price is not acceptable
- (iii) As the commission paid by the agent to the DAPE is not at “arms length”, the estimation that 10% of the profits on sales of spare parts were attributable to the activities carried out by the agent in India and taxable is reasonable. The test is “profits expected to make” and has to be determined bearing in mind the fact that the agent was merely rendering support services and had no authority to negotiate and accept contracts and also assumed limited risk. S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Business connection – Permanent establishment – Royalty – Offshore supply of equipment & software – DTAA – India-Sweeden [Article 13]

The assessee, a Swedish company, entered into contracts with ten cellular operators for the supply of hardware equipment and software. The contracts were signed in India. The supply of the equipment was on CIF basis and the assessee took responsibility thereof till the goods reached India. The equipment was not to be accepted by the customer till the acceptance test was completed (in India). The assessee claimed that the income arising from the said activity was not chargeable to tax in India. The Assessing Officer & CIT(A) held that the assessee had a "business connection" in India under section 9(1)(i) & a "permanent establishment" under Article 5 of the DTAA. It was also held that the income from supply of software was assessable as "royalty" under section 9(1)(vi) & Article 13. On appeal, it was held that as the equipment had been transferred by the assessee offshore, the profits therefrom were not chargeable to tax. It was also held that the profits from the supply of software was not assessable to tax as "royalty". On appeal by the department to the High Court, HELD dismissing the appeal that:

- (i) The profits from the supply of equipment were not chargeable to tax in India because the property and risk in goods passed to the buyer outside India. The assessee had not performed installation service in India. The fact that the contracts were signed in India could not by itself create a tax liability. The nomenclature of a "turnkey project" or "works contract" was not relevant. The fact that the assessee took "overall responsibility" was also not material. Though the supply of equipment was subject to the "acceptance test" performed in India, this was not material because the contract made it clear that the "acceptance test" was not a material event for passing of the title and risk in the equipment supplied. If the system did not conform to the specifications, the only consequence was that the assessee had to cure the defect. The position might have been different if the buyer had the right to reject the equipment on the failure of the acceptance test carried out in India. Consequently, the assessee did not have a "business connection" in India.
- (ii) The argument that the software component of the supply should be assessed as "royalty" is not acceptable because the software was an integral part of the GSM mobile telephone system and was used by the cellular operator for providing cellular services to its customers. It was embedded in the equipment and could not be independently used. It merely facilitated the functioning of the equipment and was an integral part thereof. The fact that in the supply contract, the lump sum price was bifurcated is not material. There is a distinction between the acquisition of a "copyright right" and a "copyrighted article".

Assessee was a dealer for Xerox India Ltd. (XIL). It was authorized to sell and otherwise promote latter in specified territories. Apart from sales, assessee was also required to render service support to customers, i.e. purchasers of product of XIL. These services were earlier provided by XIL directly to customer. To compensate XIL for the loss of revenues on account of hiring of the service function to assessee, the assessee was to pay a certain sum out of service fee received from customers to XIL. Assessee claimed that payments made to XIL could not be treated as "fees for technical services". S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Principles on "splitting of turnkey contracts" – Offshore supply – DTAA – India-Korea. [Art. 5(1), 5(2)]

The assessee, a Korean company, entered (together with L&T) into a contract dated 28.2.2006 with ONGC for the "surveys, design, engineering, procurement, installation" etc of a project on turnkey basis. On 24.5.2006, the assessee opened a Project Office which constituted a 'Permanent Establishment'. The assessee claimed, relying on Ishikawajima-Harima 288 ITR 408 (SC) & Hyundai Heavy Industries 291 ITR 482 (SC) that the revenue from "offshore supply" and "offshore services" was not assessable to tax in India as no part of it was attributable to the PE. The Assessing Officer & DRP rejected the claim on the basis that (i) the assessee had actively participated in pre-bid meetings and the project office was in existence even at the stage of the "kick-off" meeting, on appeal by the assessee to the Tribunal, The Tribunal held (i) The contract was not divisible into one part for the fabrication of platform and the other for installation & commissioning. Its terms showed that it was a composite contract from surveys of pre-engineering to start-up and commissioning of the entire facilities;

(ii) The opening of the Project Office was a condition precedent before the commencement of the activity of the contractor. The scope of the Project Office was not restricted either by the assessee or by the RBI. Also, the resolutions of the assessee showed that the Project Office was opened for coordination and execution of project. It was clear that all the activities to be carried out in respect of the contract were to be routed through the Project Office;

(iii) Hyundai Heavy Industries (2007) 291 ITR 482 (SC) is not applicable because there (a) the project office was to work only as a liaison office and was not authorized to carry on any business activity and (b) the contract was divisible into two parts and so the argument that the PE does not come into existence till the fabrication work is done was accepted;

(iv) The argument that if an "installation PE" is to come into existence under Article 5(3), one cannot have regard to the PE under Articles 5(1) & 5(2) is not acceptable. The Project Office constituted a PE under Article 5(1) and an "Installation PE" was not necessary;

- (v) The onus is on the assessee to show that office did not play a role in the project. On the other hand, the contract proceeds on the basis that the PO played a vital role in the execution of the project;
- (vi) The attribution to India of profit from off-shore supply has to be based on material and done based on the extent of activity done by the PO (matter remanded). (A.Y 2007-08)

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Royalties – Fees for included services – Permanent establishment – DTAA – India-USA. [Article 12(3)]

Assessee was non resident incorporated as corporation under Laws of USA. Main object of assessee was to provide high quality medical training and enhance quality of patient care and research by teaching training and sharing medical and technological know how with scientists and health care professionals in various countries. During the relevant assessment years the assessee received certain amount from hospitals located in India. Assessing Officer held that 90 percent of receipts taxable as royalty under Article 12(3) of DTAA between India and USA and 10 percent of payment was in nature of Fees for included services (FIS) taxable under Article 12(4). The Tribunal held that consideration received by assessee could not be said to be royalty as it was not a payment for right to use any copy right, trade mark or industrial, commercial or scientific experience. Assessee also did not make available any technical knowledge, experience, skill for included services. Therefore, it could be concluded that entire payment received by assessee from WHL was in the nature of business profits and since assessee did not have permanent establishment in India, same could not be brought to tax in India. The assessee received certain amount as reimbursement of expenses. Assessing Officer was of the view that reimbursement of expenses was also part of consideration for rendering the services he applied the same ratio. The Tribunal held that if it is held to be business income the same cannot be taxable in India applying as the assessee does not have any permanent establishment. If it is held to be other income the same cannot be brought to tax in view of Article 23(1) of DTAA. Accordingly the Tribunal deleted the addition made by the Assessing Officer. One "W" Ltd. was engaged in the business of Cargo Consolidation. It received Cargo from various shippers / consignors at Mumbai Port / Container Freight Station Mumbai / JNPT for shipments to various destinations world wide. A delivery schedule of Cargo had to be strictly adhered to. Assessing Officer noticed that "W" Ltd. had payment to assessee, a company located at Singapore on which no tax was deducted at source. Assessing Officer issued show cause notice to "W" Ltd. calling upon to why it should not be treated as an agent of Non-resident under section 163. Assessing Officer estimated profitability at 10 percentage of freight income earned by assessee and same was treated as business income. Commissioner (Appeals) confirmed the order of Assessing Officer. Tribunal found that "W" Ltd. was acting on behalf of several non-residents and therefore, Article 5(9) was not attracted as the "W" Ltd. had no permanent Establishment in India, even if income accrued or arose to it in form of business income, same could not be taxed in India. S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Software embedded in off-shore supply may be taxable even if supply not taxable

The assessee, a USA company, entered into two separate contracts with AAI, one for supply of equipment and the other for rendering installation and training services. The

Assessing Officer & CIT(A) held (i) that the two contracts were an “indivisible works contract”, (ii) that as the supply involved embedded software, the income had to be bifurcated between “supply of equipment” and “royalty” in the ratio of 30:70, (iii) that the equipment-supply profits had accrued on completion of contract and not at the time of transfer of title, (iv) that 50% of the equipment-supply profits was attributable to the assessee’s PE in India and this was taxable at the global profit rate of 13.4%. On appeal to the Tribunal, Held,:

- (i) The two contracts constitute one agreement because (a) the essential purpose of both contracts was to set up the ATS, (b) the contract for supply of equipment and software would have been of no consequence without installation and performance services, (c) the dates of payment for the supply contract were connected with the service contract and (d) it was difficult to segregate the contract from installation/service contract (Ishikawajima-Harima Heavy Industries Ltd. v. Director of Income-tax (2007) 288 ITR 408 (SC) referred);
- (ii) The PE came into existence on clearance of the goods in India because after transfer of title outside India, the possession was handed over to the assessee for safe custody, installation etc. This required storage space and supervision which cannot be said to be preliminary or auxiliary activities in nature as the equipments were required to be installed;
- (iii) The bifurcation of revenue into supply of equipment and software in the ratio of 30:70 had to be upheld because (a) though the software was embedded in the equipment and supplied as one package for one price, it was permissible to segregate the composite consideration into different components and (b) the assessee had not shown the segregation done by the customs authorities for imposing duty on the equipment and software (Rotem Company (2005) 279 ITR 165 (AAR) & Motorola Inc v. Dy. CIT (2005) 95 ITD 269 (SB) referred);
- (iv) In a turnkey contract, in which the assessee is under obligation to supply the equipment and the software and also install them, the profit is taxable on completion of each milestone and not at the time of handing over the functioning system to the contracting party. The department’s argument that in a works contract, mere supply of equipment and software is of no consequence till installation and so profits should be taxed at that stage is not correct because even if “turnkey”, the taxable events in the execution of a contract may arise in several stages in several years if the obligations under the contract are distinct ones. The supply profits are consequently not taxable as it accrued on supply outside India;
- (v) On facts, as the supply of equipment and software constituted a milestone in the contract, the income therefrom arose in the year of shipment which was in an earlier year. It did not accrue or arise in the present year. As the PE came into existence when the equipment was handed over to it by the AAI, the profits from installation contract and services was taxable. (A. Y. 1999-2000)

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Salary to staff at Netherland [S. 40(a)(iii), 192]

Assessee did not deduct tax at source on salary payments made to staff at Netherlands. Assessing officer invoked the provisions of 40(a)(iii), and disallowed the payments made on the ground that the tax was not deducted under section 192. The Tribunal held that since salaries had been paid to non-residents for services rendered abroad, provisions of Explanation to section 9(1)(ii) were not applicable to assessee. Since salary paid to non resident's for services rendered in Netherlands was not chargeable to tax in India, provisions of section 192 cannot be applied hence disallowance made by applying the provisions of section 40(a)(iii) were liable to be deleted. S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue and arise in India – Royalty or fee for technical services – For “Equipment Royalty” under section 9(1)(vi), control of equipment by payer essential

- (i) The word “use” in relation to equipment occurring in clause (iva) of Expl to section 9(1)(vi) is not to be understood in the broad sense of availing of the benefit of an equipment. The context and collocation of the two expressions “use” and “right to use” followed by the word “equipment” indicate that there must be some positive act of utilization, application or employment of equipment for the desired purpose. If an advantage was taken from sophisticated equipment installed and provided by another, it could not be said that the recipient/customer “used” the equipment as such. The customer merely made use of the facility, though he did not himself use the equipment. What is contemplated by the word “use” in clause (iva) of Expl. 2 to section 9(1)(vi) is the customer came face to face with the equipment, operated it or controlled its functions in some manner. But if it did nothing to or with the equipment and did not exercise any possessory rights in relation thereto, it only made use of the facility created by the service provider who was the owner of the entire network and related equipment and there was no scope to invoke clause (iva) in such a case because the element of service predominated (ISRO Satellite Center (ISAC) (2008) 307 ITR 59 (AAR), Dell International Services (India) P. Ltd. (2008) 305 ITR 37 (AAR) & Asia Satellite Tele Communications Co. Ltd. v. Director of Income-tax (2011) 332 ITR 340 (Delhi) followed;

- (ii) On facts, the banner advertisement hosting services did not involve use or right to use by the assessee any industrial, commercial or scientific equipment and no such use was actually granted by Yahoo (Hong Kong) Ltd to the assessee. Uploading and display of banner advertisement on its portal was entirely the responsibility of Yahoo (Hong Kong) and the assessee was only required to provide the banner Ad to Yahoo (Hong Kong) for uploading the same on its portal. The assessee had no right to access the portal of Yahoo (Hong Kong) and there was nothing to show any positive act of utilization or employment of the portal of Yahoo (Hong Kong) by the assessee. Therefore, payment for the banner advertisement hosting services was also not royalty. (A. Y. 2004-05)

Mere existence of subsidiary does not by itself constitute the subsidiary company as a PE of the parent. ### S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Business connection – Liaison office – Permanent establishment [S. 90]

The term "business connection" is so broad in scope. Explanation 2 inserted below section 9(1) by the Finance Act, 2003 with effect from 1-4-2004 expands the scope of the expression. Though the Explanation does not apply to the year under consideration; i.e., A.Y. 2001-02, even applying the tests laid down in decided cases the issue resolved against the assessee. In CIT v. R.D. Aggarwal & Co. [1965] 56 ITR 20 the Supreme Court held that the expression means something more than a business, that it presupposes an element of continuity between the business of the non-resident and the activity in the taxable territory though a stray or isolated transaction would not be taken in, that the connection may take several forms, that it may include carrying on a part of the main business or activity incidental to the non-resident through an agent or it may merely be a relation between the business of the non-resident and the activity in the taxable territory which facilitates or assists the carrying on of that business. (A.Y. 2001-02)

Liaison office of the US company engaged in the business of trans border money transfers cannot be regarded as fixed place PE of the company in India as it carries out only the prepatory or auxiliary activities, nor the agents appointed by the company in India constitute agency PE as they are independent and render services of money transfer on behalf of the company in the ordinary course of the business carried on by them and therefore, profits if any, attributable to the Indian operations of the company cannot be assessed as business profits under Article 7 of the DTAA and are therefore, not taxable in India. ### S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Business Connection – Signing the agreement

As per Explanation (a) to section 9 (1) (i), where part of the operations of business are carried out side India, only part of income reasonably attributable to operations carried outside India shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India. The use of the word “shall” in the said Explanation is unequivocally indicative of the legislative mandate contained therein. The explanation, in no uncertain terms, envisages only such type of income to be deemed to accrue or arise in India under section 9(1)(i). Thus an income cannot be said to be deemed income just because either agreement was signed in India or income had been received in India. (A.Y. 1993-94)

As this was not the case here, payment cannot be considered as fees for technical services. Neither is it royalty as applicant only imparted its final conclusions and was not transferring any knowhow ; further in view of Articles 7 and 5 of the Treaty, such income could only be taxed in India if applicant had a PE in India and in the absence of which the same is not taxable in India.

Liaison office in India of non-resident for purchasing goods in its own name but consigned / supplied directly to group companies or customers outside India - AAR observed that applicant's activity in India is confined to the purchase of goods only as the applicant sells goods outside India and the sale price is also recovered outside India; further, the delivery of the goods was requested to be consigned to the customers of the applicant with a view to save time and freight - hence held no income can be attributed to such activity and hence not taxable in India.

Applicant, Fosters Australia entered into a Brand License Agreement with Foster's India granting it an exclusive license to brew, package, label, and sell Foster's Lager (beer) and an exclusive right of user of the trade-marks within India; subsequently, the applicant enters into an agreement with a UK company to transfer shares and other intangible assets in India; UK purchaser nominates an Indian company in its place and Deed of Assignment is executed between applicant and such nominee Indian company SKOL Breweries – Issue is whether the trade-marks and Foster's Brand and Brewing IP rights owned by the applicant Foster's Australia and conveyed/ assigned to SKOL Breweries can be said to be capital assets situate in India and the consideration received in connection therewith is liable to be treated as income that accrues or arises in India - AAR observed that situs of capital asset is important as the charge to tax is attracted if the asset is situated India; AAR held that the intellectual property comprising of Foster's trade-marks and brand I.P. can be said to be located in India where the business of Foster's India was being carried on in conjunction with the applicant as the trade-marks registered in India together with the other features of Foster's brand had undoubtedly generated appreciable goodwill in Indian market and such goodwill has been nurtured in India by reason of coordinated efforts of the applicant and Foster's India till the date of the agreement - Hence ruled that transfer of intangibles such as trade-marks and Intellectual Property are integral part of business in India and hence situate in India and hence taxable in India.

Capital Gains arises from transfer of shares in Indian wholly-owned subsidiary in course of corporate reorganization – Applicant contended that since the transaction involves transfer of shares of an Indian company the resulting income shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India and the same would be taxable as capital gains in India; but the transaction would also attract Article 13(5) of the DTAA which stipulates that if capital gains are realized in the course of a corporate organization/reorganization, amalgamation, division, etc., such gains shall be taxable only in the State in which the alienator is resident – AAR upheld applicant's views in entirety and ruled transfer is exempt from tax in India; further, as there is no chargeability in India, there is also no applicability of TDS and of filing return of income; further, transfer pricing norms also not applicable in absence of liability to pay tax.

Assignment of Turbocharger Development and Supply Agreement by non-resident applicant to newly set-up Indian resident subsidiary – AAR observed that based on facts, it appeared that the Indian subsidiary would be carrying on business in its own rights and not on behalf of the applicant and that it has also acquired business under the deed of assignment that was executed outside India and consideration for which is also payable outside India; the situs of the deed being of Switzerland (outside India), the income or profit if any, accruing or arising to the applicant on account of deed of assignment cannot therefore be said to arise in India. It therefore follows that the applicant has no business connection in India; AAR further observed that from a close reading of the said agreements, it was amply clear that none of the clauses of explanation-2 of S. 9(1)(vi) is attracted and hence consideration cannot be treated as royalty; hence ruled that receipt from proposed assignment would not be taxable in India.

Transfer outside India of shares of an Indian Company by one non-resident to another non-resident - AAR observed that the capital asset viz. shares of an Indian company that has been transferred is situated in India and hence income accruing from it is chargeable as per S.9(1); further as per Article 13 of DTAA, each contracting state may tax capital gains in accordance with the provisions of its domestic law and hence, even the DTAA will not bail out the transferee from the chargeability of the capital gains under section 9(1)(i) of the Act read with section 45(1) of the Act; also ruled that as per S. 163 which is a inclusive provision, the non-resident transferee (the applicant) may be assessed as a representative assessee of the transferor and S. 195 relating to TDS is also applicable to the applicant.

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Royalty – Fees for technical services – India-Singapore – DTAA [Articles 7 & 12]

Non-resident has developed an Internet based carrier-neutral air cargo portal located on its server in Singapore; Cargo agents utilize it to check & book cargo space; it opened a liaison office in Chennai to act as a communication channel between the Head Office and parties in India; it also imparts training by way of demonstration only and no technical knowledge is imparted to the subscribers - Revenue contended that provision of on-site Helpdesk and training to the Agents indicate that Liaison office is carrying on the business of the Applicant either wholly or partly and is therefore a PE in India - AAR observed that the complex portal designed by the applicant is the result of long standing commercial experience and research in the line of cargo booking and that the portal and the server together constitute integrated commercial-cum-scientific equipment and for obtaining Internet access to airlines, the use of portal without server is unthinkable. Hence, it falls within the definition of Royalty as per IT Act as well as the DTAA; further, the technical and consultancy services being rendered by the employees of the applicant in training the subscribers and providing help desk support in India is covered by the description of 'Fees for technical services'; hence payments cannot be considered as business income but are in nature of Royalty & Fees for Technical Services and are subject to TDS in India.

It is immaterial whether the export is to Hong Kong or to any other country as the said clause does not specify that the export should only be to the country of which the applicant is a tax resident – Hence ruled that it cannot be held to have earned any income taxable in India.

S. 9 : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Investments by FII whether business income or capital gains – Non-resident – FII regulations – India-USA – DTAA [Articles 5 & 7]

Portfolio investments by non-resident pension fund under FII scheme of SEBI for investments in India – Applicant sought advance ruling whether sale of portfolio investments in India would be treated as business income and whether in the absence of PE in India, such business income will be taxable in India as per the DTAA – Revenue contended such sale would constitute capital gains – AAR observed that it is no doubt true that the provisions of the FII investors scheme suggest that the investment in shares would be to acquire the capital assets; the requirement of Section 18 of the FII's regulations also speaks on realization of capital gains of investment from the corpus and Section 115 AD, a special provision in the Act, provides special rate for taxation of short term capital gains as well as long term gains. But relying on various judgments / rulings, Authority observed that substantial nature of transactions, manner of maintaining books of accounts, magnitude of purchases and sales and the ratio between purchases and sales and the holding would furnish a good guide to determine the nature of transactions and if object of the investment in shares of a company is to derive income by way of dividend etc. then the profits accruing by change in such investment (by sale of shares) will yield capital gain and not revenue receipt; further details submitted by applicant shows substantial nature of transactions and magnitude of the purchases and sales of shares/securities in various companies in India. Nothing was produced before AAR to show that the object of the investment in the was to derive only the income by way of dividend; hence held to be business income and not capital gains – Further as regards DTAA, it observed that import of article 1(1) read with Article 4(1)(b) of the DTAA is to exclude the income of a trust that is not subject to tax in that state (USA) from the definition of resident of a Contracting State (USA) for purposes of the treaty. Hence, it ruled that the applicant is not a resident of Contracting State (USA) and therefore it cannot avail the benefit of the terms of the Treaty and hence profits are taxable in India as Business Income

Resident applicant entered into a Repairs contract and a Software modifications contract with non-resident from whom it had earlier purchased the system; Repair of the hardware would require dispatch of defective parts to non-resident's facilities in USA or Canada where repairs would be done or replacement part will be supplied. Similarly, the defects in the software would also be attended to outside India – AAR observed that insofar as software and documentation are concerned, the applicant acquired a right to use the same subject to certain conditions but the hardware and other equipment were subject matter of outright sale in favour of the applicant; hence in regard to repair of hardware, payment received by non-resident does not fall within the meaning of income from the furnishing of services as defined in article 12 and would, therefore, be business profits within the meaning of para 7 of article 7. As it has no PE in India the payment will not be taxable in India in view of the provisions of article 7 of the treaty. In regard to repair of software, payment received by non-resident answer the description of fees for included services within the meaning of sub-para (a) of para 4 of article 12 and the same shall be taxable in India.

Conversion of UK-based investment funds structured as Unit Trusts into Open-ended investment companies; there is no sale, exchange, or extinguishments of underlying assets (including the Indian securities) as a result of change from the Unit trusts to the OEICs; also there was no payment of consideration by the OEICs to the Unit trusts – AAR observed that as a result of reorganization the position of the applicant as a trustee of the funds has been changed to that of a depository of OEICs and this by itself would not attract the provisions of section 9(1) (i) of the Act; if, however, the reorganization results in transfer of shares held by the applicant in Indian companies, it would attract section 9(1)(i) of the Act; further, SEBI has also communicated its 'no objection' to the proposed change in name of fund from Trustee to Depository and also the applicant obtained the clearance of the Inland Revenue of UK to the reorganization and it is registered as FSA and it has necessary permission to act as a trustee and a depository - Hence ruled that the transaction being in the nature or reorganization is not chargeable to tax in India or under the India-UK DTAA.

Non-resident publisher sourcing advertisements from India through Indian agent who collects the advertisement charges from Indian advertisers in Indian currency and remits the same in foreign currency; question is whether such an arrangement is tantamount to income being deemed to accrue or arise in India to the non-resident – AAR stated that on the facts of the case, it is clear that business activities mentioned in Explanation 2 to said Section are carried out in India by resident agent for non-resident and hence, there is 'business connection' between them in India; however, as per Article 7 of DTAA, profit shall be taxable in India only if it has PE situated in India and only so much of them as is directly or indirectly attributed to that PE; further, Article 5(5) implies that a non-resident shall not be deemed to have a PE merely because it carries on business in the other State through a broker, general commission agent or any other agent of an independent status provided that such persons are acting in the ordinary course of business; there is no doubt that resident is sole agent of non-resident, but what is required to be shown is that non-resident is the sole client of agent to bring it within the mischief of the second part of para 5; but it is shown that agent has other clients from whom it earns between 22% to 25% of its income, so it cannot be said that its activities are carried out wholly or almost wholly for non-resident – Hence held it is Business Connection but not Permanent Establishment as Indian agent is independent and not working wholly or almost wholly for non-resident.

Following principles emerges regarding accrual /deemed accrual of income of non resident from sale of goods in India.

- (1) In a case of sale of goods simpliciter by non-resident to a resident in India, if the consideration for sale is received abroad and the property in the goods also passes to the purchaser outside India, no income accrues or arises or is deemed to accrues or arise to the seller in India.
- (2) In a case of transaction, sale of goods by the non-resident to an Indian resident which is part of a composite contract involving various operations within and outside, income from such sale shall be deemed to accrue or arise in India if it accrues or arises through or from any business connection in India.
- (3) In the case of a business of which operations are not carried out in India, the deemed accrual or arising of income shall be only such part of the income as is reasonably attributable to the operations carried out in India.
- (4) Whether there is business connection in India or whether all operations of the business are not carried out in India are questions of fact which have to be determined on the facts of each case.

S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Income from license of software assessable as “royalty” – Deduction at source [S. 195]

The assessee imported "shrink-wrapped"/ "off-the-shelf" software from suppliers in foreign countries and made payment for the same without deducting tax at source under section 195. The Assessing Officer & CIT(A) held that the payments were assessable to tax as "royalty" under section 9(1)(vi) / Article 12 and that the assessee was liable to pay the tax under section 201. On appeal, the Tribunal relied on the judgment of the Supreme Court in Tata Consultancy Services v State of AP (2004) 271 ITR 401 (SC) and held that the assessee had acquired a "copyrighted article" but not the "copyright" itself and so the amount paid was not assessable as "royalty". On appeal by the department, held reversing the Tribunal:

- (i) Under section 9(1)(vi) of the Act & Article 12 of the DTAA, "payments of any kind in consideration for the use of, or the right to use, any copyright of a literary, artistic or scientific work" is deemed to be "royalty". Under the Copyright Act, 1957, a software programme constitutes a "copyright". A right to make a copy of the software and use it for internal business by making copy of the same and storing it on the hard disk amounts to a use of the copyright under section 14(1) of that Act because in the absence of such a license, there would have been an infringement of the copyright. Accordingly, the argument that there is no transfer of any part of the copyright and the transaction involves only a sale of a copyrighted article is not acceptable. The amount paid to the supplier for supply of the "shrink-wrapped" software is not the price of the CD alone nor software alone nor the price of license granted. It is a combination of all. In substance unless a license was granted permitting the end user to copy and download the software, the CD would not be helpful to the end user;
- (ii) There is a difference between a purchase of a book or a music CD because while these can be used once they are purchased, software stored in a dumb CD requires a license to enable the user to download it upon his hard disk, in the absence of which there would be an infringement of the owner's copyright. S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Royalties and fees for included services – Data base – DTAA – India-USA – Non-resident – Deduction at source [S. 195, Art. 12]

Assessee made certain payments to a non-resident 'G' USA/ Ireland, on which no tax was deducted under section 195, on the ground that the payment was akin to making a subscription for a journal or magazine of a foreign publisher and though the journal contained information concerning commercial, industrial or technical knowledge, payee made no attempt to impart same to payer and thus, payment fell outside scope of clause (ii) of Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vi) as well as article 12 of Indo-US DTAA. Assessing Officer held that payments made to 'G' was 'royalty' within the meaning of Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vi) and in alternative 'fees for technical services'(Included services) both of which were liable for tax in India in terms of section 195, read with section 9(1)(vi) and (vii) and relevant provisions of DTAA. The Court held that 'G' had maintained a data base and it had granted online access of same to assessee therefore, the payment made by assessee for licence to use data base maintained by 'G' was to be treated as royalty. Since assessee failed to deduct tax at source while making payment of royalty to 'G' impugned order passed by Assessing Officer was up held. (A.Ys. 2001-02 to 2003-04).

S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Royalty – Income from license of software not assessable as "royalty". Gracemac not followed; Motorola still good law – DTAA – India-Israeli

The assessee, an Israeli company, entered into an agreement with Reliance Infocomm for supply and license of software for RIL's wireless network in India. The assessee received

₹ 3 crores which it claimed to be "business profits" and not taxable for want of a permanent establishment (PE) in India. The Assessing Officer took the view that the said sum was assessable as "royalty". This was reversed by the CIT(A) following Motorola Inc. (2005) 96 TTJ 1 (Delhi)(SB). In appeal before the Tribunal, the department argued that in view of Gracemac Corp. (2010) 42 SOT 550 (Delhi), the use of software was assessable as "royalty". The Tribunal dismissing the appeal held that, (i) Under Article 12(3) of the India-Israel DTAA, royalty is defined inter alia to mean payments for the "use of" a "copyright" or a "process". There is a distinction between "use of copyright" and "use of a copyrighted article". In order to constitute "use of a copyright", the transferee must enjoy four rights viz: (i) the right to make copies of the software for distribution to the public, (ii) The right to prepare derivative computer programmes based upon the copyrighted programme, (iii) the right to make a public performance of the computer programme and (iv) The right to publicly display the computer programme. If these rights are not enjoyed, there is no "use of a copyright". The consideration is also not for "use of a process" because what the customer is paying for is not for the "process" but for the "results" achieved by use of the software. It will be a hyper technical approach totally divorced from ground business realities to hold that the use of software is use of a "process". (Motorola Inc. (2005) 96 TTJ 1 (Delhi)(SB) and Asia Sat (2011) 332 ITR 340 (Delhi) followed. Gracemac Corp. (2010) 42 SOT 550 (Delhi) not followed);

(ii) It is well settled that a DTAA prevails over the Act where it is more favourable to the assessee. The view taken in Gracemac, relying on Gramophone Co. AIR 1984 SC 667, that the Act overrides the treaty provisions where there is irreconcilable conflict is not acceptable because (a) it is obiter dicta, (b) contrary to Azadi Bachao Andolan 263 ITR 706 (SC) and (c) Gramophone Co. not applicable to Income-tax Act, 1961 as it dealt with law in which specific enabling clause for treaty override did not exist. S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Payment for "live telecast" of event is not "royalty" nor arising from "business connection"

The assessee entered into an agreement with Nimbus, a Singapore entity, for receiving and broadcasting matches that were to be played in Bangladesh. The signals to be broadcast were on account of live matches as well as recorded matches. The assessee applied for a certificate under section 195 in which it accepted that the payment on account of recorded matches was in the nature of "royalty" but claimed that the payment towards live matches was not "royalty". The Assessing Officer held that there was no distinction between the payment for live matches and that for recorded matches and both were assessable as "royalty". He also held that as the matches were to be broadcast in Indian Territory and the income by way of advertisements and subscription was to be received by the assessee, there was a "business connection" between Nimbus and receipt in India. On appeal, the CIT(A) upheld the Assessing Officer's finding on "business connection" though he reversed the finding that the payment for live matches was "royalty". On further appeal by the department, the assessee filed application under Rule 27, challenging, the issue of "business connection". The Tribunal held deciding both issues in favour of the assessee that :

(i) Expl 2 to 9(1)(vi) defines "royalty" to mean consideration for "the transfer of all or any rights in respect of any copyright." Under the Copyright Act, the term "copyright" means the exclusive right to use the "work" in the nature of cinematography. The question of granting exclusive right to do any work can arise only when such "work" has come into existence. The existence of "work" is a precondition and must precede the granting of exclusive right for doing of such work. Unless the work itself is created, there is no question of a copyright of such work. The result is that there is no copyright in live events and depicting the same does not infringe any copyright. Accordingly, the amount paid for broadcast of live matches is not assessable as "royalty" (clause 314 (220) of the Direct Tax Code Bill, 2010 referred to which proposes to define "royalty" to include "live coverage of any event");

(ii) The department's argument that because the matches will be broadcast in India and the assessee will earn advertisement & subscription income, Nimbus has a "business connection" in India is not correct because Nimbus has merely given a license for the live broadcast of the matches and continues to retain the rights in such broadcast. The mere act of allowing the assessee broadcast the matches for consideration does not constitute a "business connection" in India. In order to constitute a "business connection", it is necessary that some sort of business activity must be done by the non-resident in the taxable territory of India (CIT v. R. D. Aggarwal and Co. and Anr. (1965) 56 ITR 20 (SC) referred) (A.Y. 2008-09). ADIT v. Neo Sports Broadcast Pvt. Ltd. (2011) 133 ITD 468 / (2012) 67 DTR 170 / 144 TTJ 412 (Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Business connection – Programmes of T.V. Channels – Transponder on its satellite – Royalty – Rental charges for transponder capacity

The assessee was amplifying and relaying the signals in the footprint area after having been up linked by the TV channels. The essence of the agreement of the TV channels with the assessee was to relay their programmes in India. If India is not in the footprint then the entire exercises become futile. The responsibility of the assessee was to make available programmes of the TV channels in India through transponder on its satellite. On the facts, it was not the mere user of any goods or information/technology in India, which was supplied by the assessee. The duty of the assessee was to amplify the programmes and then pass over the same in India. However, it was held that the assessee would acquire the right to receive the income only when these programmes are made available in India. The crux of the contacts with the TV channels was to ensure that the assessee provide the signals in India after carrying out certain processes in the space. Similarly, all the TV channels approached the assessee only because it had its footprint in India. Had India been not in its footprint, no customer interested in showing their programmes in India would have availed the services of the assessee. If the assessee had only amplified the programmes and passed over to its customer outside India, who in turn had made arrangement for sending the same to cable operators for use in India, it would have been the case of no business connection of assessee in India. Since the signals are provided by the assessee for direct use in India, it was held that the case of assessee was having business connection in India. In the present case it was not merely the user of any goods sold by the TV channels in India but a continuous process through which the TV channels were showing their programmes in India by the medium of the assessee. However, it was held that the assessee has business connection in India. As per the Explanation (a) to sub-clause (i) of Sec. 9(1) which provides that in the case of a business of which all the operations are not carried out in India, the income of the business deemed under this clause to accrue or arise in India shall be only such part of the income as is reasonably attributable to the operations carried out in India. However, the effect of this Explanation is that unless the operations are carried out in India, no part of income arising from business connection can be said to be covered in clause (i). In other words, if all the business operations are carried out in India then the income arising from business connection in India would be taxed in entirety under the said clause. And if no operations are carried out in India then no income from business connection in India can be taxed in India.

However, on the facts of the case, it was held provisions of s. 9(1)(i) were not attracted as no part of operations of assessee's business was carried out in India although the assessee, a foreign satellite company, had business connection in India as it was making available programmes of TV channels directly in India through transponder on its satellite by amplifying and relaying the signals after up linking by TV channels.

As the assessee was making available transponder capacity to TV channels and receiving signals from its customers, i.e., TV channels, by way of up linked beam, changing its frequency, amplifying the same and relaying it from the transponder of the satellite to cable operators in India and signals sent by the customers come into contact with the process in transponder it was held that the TV channels were clearly 'using' the transponder capacity for carrying on their business in India. The word 'secret', occurring before the word 'formula' in clause (iii) of Explanation 2 to s. 9(1)(vi), cannot be prefixed to 'process' as well-What the TV channels were using was the process made available by the assessee through its transponder which is a part of satellite, cannot be termed as an equipment and hence leasing out of transponders cannot be equated with the leasing out of any equipment and therefore, the contention that the rental income could be charged to tax only after clause (iva) of the Explanation came into effect was held to be not acceptable. Merely because the lease rentals were fixed on annual basis it cannot be said that the payment is for any consideration other than rendering of said services. However, the activity which is resulting into income in the hands of TV channels who are non-residents is the ultimate viewer ship of programmes transmitted by them in the footprint areas including India.

Thus, these TV channels were not only carrying on their business in India but were also earning income from the source in India. Accordingly, on the facts of the case it was held that the lease rent paid by the TV channels to the assessee was 'royalty' within the meaning of s. 9(1)(vi) read with the Explanation 2. S. 9(1)(vi) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Fees for technical services – Royalty – Avoidance of tax – Transfer pricing – Provision of support services to maintain group standard – Makes available technical knowledge, skills, etc. – DTAA – India-Netherland [Article. 12.5]

The applicant, a company based in Netherlands is in the business of manufacture and sale of sugar confectionary and gum and also provides operational and other support services for the benefit of Perfetti Van Melle Group companies. It is providing these support services to Perfetti Van Melle India Pvt. Ltd. (Perfetti India) and invoicing on cost to cost basis. The employees and other personnel of applicant does not visit India for providing these services. The question arises as to whether the payment made by Perfetti India for the services will not be chargeable to tax in India as per the provisions of DTAA?

If the answer to (a) above is negative, whether the cost to be allocated to Perfetti India will not be in nature of income and not chargeable to tax in India?

If the Applicant is not taxable in India for the costs to be allocated, whether Perfetti India will not be liable to withhold taxes under section 195?

Assuming that the Applicant has no other taxable income in India, whether the Applicant will be absolved from filing a tax return and whether the transfer pricing provisions of section 92 to section 92F will be applicable to the Applicant?

Applicant submits that the functions in respect of which costs will be allocated are managerial and not technical or consultancy in nature and Perfetti India will not get equipped with the knowledge or expertise for application in future. Being managerial services, these are outside the purview of Article 12 and in the absence of a specific clause of service PE in the DTAC, the question of service PE for the services to be rendered by the Applicant does not arise

The Revenue argued that these services will enable Perfetti India to manage its services efficiently based on the reports, codes and procedures without further help from the Applicant. The services are in the nature of managerial and consultancy services since there is no technical services, the phrase "make available" would have no application.

Authority placed reliance on the decisions in case of Intertek Testing Services (2008) (307 ITR 418) and G.V.K. Industries (228 ITR 564) and held that the services are of technical in nature. The fruits of the services remain available to the person utilizing the services in some concrete shape such as technical knowledge, experience, skills, etc. The decision in case of Raymond Ltd. (86 ITD 791) is relied upon.

Trademark Technology and Know-how License Agreement (TTLA) gives right to manufacture and the service agreement brings the efficiency in such manufacture. The two agreements are inextricably attached to each other or atleast complimentary to each other. The meaning of make available cannot be drawn from the DTAA between India and US. Thus it was held by the Authority that services under the Service Agreement when read with TTLA, fall within the purview of Article 12.5(a) of the DTAC as such services "are ancillary and subsidiary to the application or enjoyment of the right, property or information for which a payment described in paragraph 4 of this Article is received".

The payment will be taxable in India under Article 12.5(a) and 12.5(b). Thus appropriate taxes are required to be deducted and the tax return is to be filed in India. Also the provisions of transfer pricing would be applicable.

relating to Basic Engineering & Procurement (BE&P) Agreement were carried out in Perth, it afforded sufficient territorial nexus to tax the receipts in India as royalty income on gross basis at the rate of 15 per cent; further ruled that the receipts from the Project Management Services agreement, shall be treated as business income and be taxable only to the extent they are attributable to the operations of PE in India.

Non-resident enters into agreement with resident call centre, data processing, technology support company for providing two-way transmission of voice and data over telecom bandwidth - Authority observed that main issue is whether any consideration is payable for the use or right to use scientific/commercial equipment; if the customer does not exercise any possessory rights in relation thereto, it only makes use of the facility created by the service provider who is the owner of entire network and related equipment; further, element of service predominates and also, similar bandwidth services through private circuits are being provided by many other telecom operators. Hence, the royalty definition under the Treaty relating to secret process is not attracted here. Further, the requirement in article 12(4) of the Treaty that technical knowledge, experience, skill, etc. should be made available has not been satisfied as there is no transfer of any technology in the sense that the recipient of the service is enabled to apply technology by itself; hence the payment does not constitute a fee for included service or fees for technical services - Ruled that payment are neither Royalty nor Fees for Technical Services or Fees for included Services and not chargeable to tax in India.

Resident applicant 'AAI' gets a grant from USA Govt. agency for feasibility study to be conducted by a 'Contractor' also an US entity - Payment for such study to be made directly by US agency to the US entity - AAR observed that role of AAI is limited only to granting approval to the contractor's performance of the study; US Contractor has no legal remedy to recover money from AAI if payment is not made by USA Govt. agency; therefore, in substance the amount is not payable by AAI at all. AAI cannot even be termed as a conduit agency for passing the money, because the amount has never been transferred to India to the full and exclusive control of AAI. The amount of grant all along remains within the control of the Government of USA - Hence held that no income can be deemed to accrue or arise in India; further, as the source of payment to Contractor is the grant made by the Govt. of USA, the royalties/fees for included services shall be deemed to arise in USA and subject to tax only in that state under the provisions of DTAA between India and USA and therefore not taxable in India either under the Income-tax Act or under the DTAA.

The constitutional validity of section 9(1)(vii)(b) was challenged by way an appeal to the Supreme Court so as to determine the extent to which laws enacted by Parliament can have extra-territorial effect under Article 245. The Constitution Bench held that Parliament is constitutionally restricted from enacting legislation with respect to extra-territorial aspects or causes that do not have, nor expected to have any, direct or indirect, tangible or intangible impact(s) on or effect(s) in or consequences for: (a) the territory of India, or any part of India; or (b) the interests of, welfare of, well-being of, or security of inhabitants of India, and Indians. In all other respects, Parliament may enact legislation with extra-territorial effect. All that is required is that the connection to India be real or expected to be real, and not illusory or fanciful. Parliament can only make laws for India and any law which has no impact on or nexus with India would be ultra-vires.

S. 9(1)(vii) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Business Connection – Fees for technical services – Permanent Establishment – DTAA – India-Japan – Offshore supply’s and offshore services – Technical Services – International Taxation [Art. 5]

Amount receivable by assessee company a resident of Japan, in respect of off shore supply of equipments and materials as part of a composite contract executed in India was not taxable in India as all parts of the transaction were carried outside India and the assessee’s permanent establishment in India had no role to play in the transaction, if income arises without any activity of the PE, taxation liability would not arise in India even under DTAA. In the present case, the entire transaction of transfer of title in goods was completed on high sea. Since all the activities in connection with the offshore supply were outside India, therefore, under section 9, income could not be deemed to accrue or arise in India. And the fact that the contract was signed in India was of no material consequence. Once excluded from the scope of taxation under the Income-tax Act, application of Double Taxation Avoidance Treaty would not arise. Further the concept of ‘a business connection’ as provided under the Incometax Act and 'a permanent establishment' as provided under the Double Taxation Avoidance Treaty are distinct.

In relation to offshore services, under section 9(1)(vii)(c) for a technical services to be taxable in India, two conditions are required to be satisfied – services must be rendered in India and the services must be utilized in India. In the present case since both the conditions are not fulfilled, they will not be taxed in India under the Income-tax Act itself. The Supreme Court further held that, income must have a sufficient territorial nexus with India so as to furnish a basis for imposition of tax in India.

The assessee, an Australian company, set up a permanent establishment (PE) in India to render technical services for evaluation of coal deposits and conducting feasibility studies for transportation of iron ore. The Assessing Officer & CIT(A) held that the payments received by the assessee were taxable as “fee for technical services” under section 9(1)(vii) read with section 115A on a gross basis without any deduction in view of section 44D at the rate of 20%. On appeal, the Tribunal held that as the assessee had a PE in India, the receipts were chargeable to tax as “business profits” after deduction of expenses under Article 7 of the DTAA and section 44D & 115A did not apply. On appeal by the department, held partly reversing the Tribunal:

- (i) As the assessee had a PE in India from which the income arose, the income was chargeable to tax as “business profits” under Article 7 of the DTAA and not as “fees for technical services” under Article 12;
- (ii) Article 7(3) permits a deduction of expenditure “in accordance with and subject to limitations of the law” relating to tax in India including executive and general administrative expenses so incurred regardless whether they have incurred in India or elsewhere. The words “in accordance with and subject to limitation of the law relating to tax" applies not only to the "executive and general administrative expenses" but to all expenditure;

- (iii) The income received by the assessee, though not assessable as "fees for technical services" under the DTAA, is "fees for technical services" under Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vii) because it is for providing technical information and does not arise from a "project". Consequently, section 44D, which provides that no deduction shall be admissible while computing income of the nature of "fees for technical services" shall apply.

Indian subsidiary entered into agreement with non-resident holding company pursuant to which the holding company agreed to render various services in favor of the applicant in USA and no part of the same was to be rendered in India. It was also agreed between the parties that the compensation payable by the applicant to Timken-USA for the services would cover only the cost actually incurred by the Timken-USA and that no profit element or mark-up on the cost would be added to it - AAR observed that agreement that Timken-USA has to render services including management services, system development and computer usage, communication services, engineering services, process in tool design services, manufacturing services etc. Any payment for providing these services is clearly "fees for technical services" as per explanation (2) to section 9(1)(vii) of the Act and "fee for included services" as per Article 12(4) DTAA of the, which would be the deemed income of Timken-USA accruing or arising in India within the meaning of sub-section(1) of Section-(9) of the Act. Further Authority reasoned that an element of profit is not an essential ingredient of receipt to be taxable as income and hence this is not a case of reimbursement of expenses and entire amount is liable to be taxed in India. Further, section 44D read with section 115A of the Act provides gross basis for taxation of such fees in the hands of non-resident corporate-assessee at the rate of 20% of such fees and there is no option in section 44D for computing income on net basis allowing the benefit of sections 28 to 44C as the principle laid down by the Hon'ble Supreme Court in the case of Union of India v. A. Sanayasi Rao and others in the context of presumptive basis of taxation of certain receipts, would apply. Accordingly, the applicant is obliged to withhold Income-Tax at appropriate rate (under the Act or the Treaty) whichever is lesser under section 195(1) of the Act.

S. 9(1)(vii) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Fees for technical services – Deduction at source – DTAA –India-Canada [Art. 12(2)]

Applicant, an owner of mines in India gets analysis of samples of ores conducted by non-resident in lab at Canada - Authority observed that it is evident that the fees is being paid to the consultant for the rendering of technical and consultancy services and not as consideration for any construction, assembly, mining or like project undertaken by it and that it would not also be the income of the consultant chargeable under the head 'salaries'. It follows that the fees payable by the applicant to the consultant satisfies all the requirements of the definition of fees for technical services within the meaning of Explanation 2 to said section and hence is considered rendered in India. Further, the rate of tax applicable for the purpose of TDS would be the lesser of the rates prescribed under Finance Act, 2005 or in para 2 of article 12 of the Treaty, that is whichever is more beneficial to the applicant.

S. 9(1)(vii) : Income deemed to accrue or arise in India – Non-Resident – Turnkey project – Permanent establishment – Fees for technical services – DTAA – India-Japan [Articles 5, 7, 12]

Resident grants contract of turnkey project to non-resident applicant who along with five other enterprises formed a consortium to execute the contract involving work categorized as: offshore supply, offshore services, onshore supply, onshore services and construction / erection – Issue is whether amounts received / receivable by applicant for offshore supply are liable to tax in India - AAR observed that it is not just a case of offshore supply as certain operations are inextricably linked in India – signing of contract in India which imposes liability on the applicant to procure equipment and machinery in India, receiving, unloading, storing and transporting, paying demurrage charges and other incidental charges on account of delay in clearance; thus, as some operations of the business were carried out in India, it follows that income accrued to the applicant through business connection in India but the profit deemed to accrue/arise in India shall be only such part of profit as is reasonably attributable to the operations carried out in India; further, it is clear that the applicant has PE in India within the meaning of article 5(3) of the Treaty as project is for more than 6 months - further ruled that from the description of the offshore services, it is evident that the price of offshore services would be deemed to accrue or arise in India as 'fees for technical services'.

S. 10(22) : Exempt incomes – Educational institution – Publication of books to the students

Exemption under section 10(22) was denied by the Assessing Officer on the ground that, since the assessee had income exclusively from publication and selling of text books to the students, it did not exist solely for educational purposes. The action of the Assessing Officer was confirmed by the High Court. The Supreme Court took into account the prior history of the corporation particularly the context in which it was incorporated. It also noted that a similar issue was decided by the Rajasthan and

Orissa High Courts. It noted that the Gauhati High Court in the impugned order had omitted to take into account several factors. Therefore, the matter was set aside to the Assessing Officer to consider the issue de novo in the light of the judgment of the Rajasthan and Orissa High Courts. The petitioner filed application seeking exemption under section 10(23C)(vi). The petitioners application was rejected on the ground that the object of the petitioner does not exist solely for educational purpose. The rejection order was challenged before the High Court. The High Court held that, the 'education' means process of training and developing, knowledge, skill, mind and character of students. Activities such as maintaining, library, conducting classes of stitching, weaving, embroidery and adult education, fall within 'education'. Sports and recreational activities also fall within modern concept of education. S. 10(23C)(iiiab) : Exempt incomes – Educational institution – Profit Motive

Where the objects and activities of the assessee institution are educational in nature and the revenue has not brought any material on record to show that the college account was having surplus or profit, year after year and the revenue has not disputed that surplus was only because of salary grant from the State Government and another grant from UGC, revenue's plea that the college run by assessee was for profit motive cannot be accepted. Expenditure on conducting entrance examination being application of income, non-availability of evidence cannot be reason of denying the exemption under section 10(23C)(iiiab). (A.Y. 2005-06)

The Director General was not justified in refusing exemption under section 10(23C)(iv) by cryptic order on the ground that by holding coaching classes for fee, the petitioner institute was engaged in "business" without considering whether it was engaged in "trade commerce or business" within the meaning of first proviso to section 2(15) and further without considering the plea of assessee that it had not violated section 11(5) or third proviso to section 10(23C)(iv). S. 10(23C)(vi) : Exempt incomes – Educational institution – Existing solely for educational purposes and not for profit – Initial approval – Considerations – Prescribed authority

The third proviso to section 10(23C)(vi) confines the words "application of income" to the objects for which the institution is established. It does not use the words "in India" in the matter of application or accumulation of income though in several other sections like sections 10(20A), 10(22B), and 11(1)(a) etc., Parliament has used the words "in India". Therefore, the words "in India" cannot be read in to the third proviso. But while imposing conditions subject to which the application is granted the prescribed authority may insist upon a certain percentage of accounting income being utilized/applied for imparting education in India.

Section 10A : Special provision in respect of newly established undertaking in Free trade zone, etc.

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Loss of other units (including B/f loss) Set-off against sections 10A, 10B profits

The issue before the High Court was whether the loss incurred by a non-eligible unit and the brought forward unabsorbed loss & unabsorbed depreciation of the eligible unit had to be set-off against the profits of the eligible unit before allowing deduction under section 10A/10B.

Held that (a) section 10A allows deduction “from the total income”. The phrase “total income” in section 10A means “the total income of the STP unit” and not “total income of the assessee". Consequently, section 10A deduction has to be given before computing the "profits & gains of business" under Chapter IV. Though section 10A was amended to make it a "deduction" provision, it continues to remain in Chapter III and was not moved to Chapter VI-A. The result is that even now section 10A is in the nature of an "exemption" provision and the profits of the eligible unit have to be deducted at source level and do not enter into the computation of income.

(b) Section 10A(6) as amended by the FA 2003 w.e.f. 1.4.2001 provides that depreciation and business loss of the eligible unit relating to the AY 2001-02 & onwards is eligible for set-off & carry forward for set-off against income post tax holiday. This amendment does not militate against the proposition that the benefit of relief under section 10A is in the nature of exemption with reference to commercial profits. However, to give effect to the legislative intention of allowing the carry forward of depreciation and loss suffered in respect of any year during the tax holiday for being set off against income post tax holiday, it is necessary that a notional computation of business income and the depreciation should be made for each year of the tax holiday period. Such loss is eligible to be carried forward. But, as the income of the section 10A unit has to be excluded at source itself before arriving at the gross total income, the question of setting off the loss of the current year's or the brought forward business loss (and unabsorbed depreciation) against the section 10A profits does not arise.

The RBI granted approval in realisation of exports proceeds but said approval was issued in the context of the provisions of the FEMA and there was no formal approval was granted by the RBI under section 10A. The Tribunal held that once the assessee had applied for extension and had completed all the formalities and in response the RBI had taken the remittances on record, then non issuance of formal letter of approval by the RBI could not be held against the assessee, it must be held that the extension had been granted in substance and therefore the benefit of section 10A had to be allowed. The court upheld the order of the Tribunal. (A.Y. 2004-05).

Assessing authority declined to grant benefit under section 10A on ground that application filed before STPI was seeking approval to establish a new unit and not for recognizing an existing unit. In Appeal the CIT(A) and Tribunal has held that the undertaking of assessee in question was not formed by splitting up at an existing business and hence it was entitled to deduction under section 10A. S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Total turnover – Export turn over – Communication charges [S. 263]

The Assessing Officer in the original assessment proceedings had not included the communication charges in the figure of total turnover for computing eligible deduction under section 10A. Commissioner passed the revision order under section 263. On appeal the Tribunal upheld the order of Commissioner. However, on merit, the Tribunal held that the communication charges had to be excluded from the total turnover for the purpose of computing the deduction under section 10A. The High Court held that when export turnover was component of total turnover and consequently, when telecommunication charges had been specifically excluded from export turnover, it being a component of total turnover, it stood to reason that telecommunication charges had also to be excluded from total turnover. Hence, the Tribunal was justified in directing the Assessing Officer to exclude communication charges out of total turnover for computing eligible deduction under section 10A. (A.Y. 2004-05).

Freight and insurance charges do not have an element of turnover and are to be excluded from the total turnover for the purpose of computing exemption under section 10A. Gain from foreign fluctuation realized within stipulated period forms part of the sale proceeds and is directly related with the export activities and as such gain should be considered as income derived from export activities eligible for exemption under section 10A, in the year in which export took place. Assessee is entitled to exemption, under section 10A with reference to addition of disallowance of PF/ESIC payments as the plain consequence of the disallowance and add back made by the Assessing Officer is an increase in business profits of the assessee. (A.Y. 2003-04)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Audit report – Export – Return

Benefit of Section 10A would be available to the petitioner even though it did not file Audit Report along with the return but filed before the framing of the assessment.

CIT v. WEB Commerce (India) P. Ltd. (2009) 318 ITR 135 / 178 Taxman 310 (Delhi)(High Court)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Interest income – Derived from

In case of interest income derived by the assessee from funds in connection with letter of credit, is not income derived from the profits of the business of the Industrial undertaking so as to be entitled to get the benefit of section 10A. (A.Y. 1985-86)

CIT v. Menon Impex (P.) Ltd. (2003) 259 ITR 403 / 128 Taxman 11 / 180 CTR 40 (Mad.)(High Court)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Allocation of expenses

Foreign Trade (Development and Regulation) Act, 1992, does not contain any provision overriding provisions of Income Tax Act, therefore, the assessee can get the exemption only as per section 10A of the Income Tax Act. Where travel expenses, telecommunication charges, professional charges and professional consultancy charges as reduced from "export turnover" bore no element of profit which would require allocation by apportionment, the said charges would stand to be excluded from computation of "Total Turnover" as well. #### S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Interest – Turnover – Freight

Interest received from bank deposit and other income shall not form part of "profit from business" for the purpose of computation of deduction under section 10A. After substitution of sub section (4) of section 10A by Finance Act, 2001, total turnover for relevant assessment years shall comprise of total turnover of business carried on by eligible "undertaking" only and not total turnover of all units of assessee for the purpose of calculation of deduction under section 10A. For the purpose of calculating deduction under section 10A, export turnover has to be reduced by freight charges, telecommunication charges or insurance charges attributable to delivery of articles or things or computer software outside India or expenses if any incurred in foreign exchange, in providing technical services out side India. Commission charges that are deducted from export turnover should also be deducted from total turnover. (A.Ys. 2003-2004 to 2005-06)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Interest – STPI – Total turnover

Deduction under section 10A is not available for interest on Bank Deposit. When the amount to be proportioned did not include the unrealized sale proceeds, the same would also not be included in the total turnover under section 10A. When assessee excluded travel expenses telecommunication charges and professional consultancy charges in the computation of "export turnover", the same has also to be reduced from the figure of 'total turnover', for the purpose of section 10A. (A.Ys. 2001-02 to 2004-2005).

Dy. CIT v. IBS Software Services (P) Ltd. (2011) 137 TTJ 54 / 52 DTR 179 / 129 ITD 21 (Cochin)(Trib.)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Adjustment of loss against taxable profit of other unit – Export turn over

From Assessment year 2001-02 section 10A is no longer an exemption provision and it allows only deduction from total income, loss from 10A unit has to be adjusted against taxable profit of other unit after deduction under section 10A has been allowed in respect of eligible units. Assessee had incurred data line cost being telecommunication charges in respect of its unit and same was included in export turnover for purpose of deduction under section 10A. Assessing Officer excluded the data line cost from export turnover. Since expenses incurred on development of software in India could not be considered as expenses attributable to delivery of computer software outside India, such expenses could not be excluded from export turnover. (A.Y. 2006-07).

Capgemini India (P) Ltd. v. Addl. CIT (2011) 46 SOT 195 / 141 TTJ 33 (UO)(Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Set off of losses – Non-eligible unit

Deduction has to be made at the stage of computing the income under head “Profits & gains” and not at the stage of computing the gross total income. The deduction under section 10A attaches to the undertaking and not to the assessee. The losses of a non-eligible unit cannot be set off against the profits of an eligible unit and are eligible to be set-off against other income or to be carried forward. (A.Ys. 2003-04 & 2004-05)

S. 10A : Newly established undertakings – Free trade zone – Conversion of firm in to company – Not transfer

The assessee was a firm. During its existence as a firm it was in export of software and claiming deduction under section 80HHE. During the year the assessee registered itself as a company and later got registered as STP unit and claimed deduction under section 10A for the first time. The claim was rejected by the Assessing Officer. on the ground that conditions of sections 10A(2)(ii) and (iii) were not fulfilled and further assessee was also hit by section 10A(9).

The CIT(A) allowed the appeal. The Tribunal agreed with the CIT(A) that conversion of a firm into a company was not a transfer as held by Bombay High Court in case of CIT v. Texspin Eng and Manufacturing Works (2003) 263 ITR 345 (Bom)(High Court)). Therefore, there was no violation of any condition of sections 10A(2)(ii) and (iii). (A.Ys. 2002-03 to 2004-05)

Assessee, an exporter of computer software was using old plant & machinery/infrastructure of another concern to develop its software. The Assessing Officer rejected the assessee's claim under section 10B on this ground that the assessee was using old plant & machinery/infrastructure of another concern. Held that since the instant case was not a case of manufacture of any article but development & creation of intellectual property namely software programme, and the essential / main inputs for such activity were that of personnel belonging to assessee and their intellect, and hence, use of computers was not significant. Therefore assessee was entitled for deduction under section 10B. (A.Y. 2002-03)

Assessee was engaged in manufacturing of precious and semi precious stones. GP rate assessed was much higher as compared to another concern i.e. V.R. Exports. Assessing Officer clubbed the turnover of both the concerns and determined the average GP rate after considering the direct expenses and reduced deduction under section 10B. The Tribunal held that since there is no business between the assessee and VR Exports, provisions of section 80IA(10) are not applicable and net profit rate of the two concerns cannot be apportioned in the ratio of turnover of both concerns. The assessee company had raised the bills for the services rendered by it in consonance with the terms of agreement settled between it and its clients from time to time and STPI having certified such services, it cannot be said that profits shown by the assessee are on the higher side and therefore, profits of the assessee company could not be reworked by applying the provisions of section 80IA(10) for the purpose of allowing exemption under section 10B. Assessee agricultural products processing company was engaged in manufacturing of gherkin pickles by purchasing raw gherkin and putting them through various processes. Assessing officer held that the assessee is not doing the manufacturing hence not entitled to exemption under section 10B. The Tribunal held that the assessee started its business on 1-4-1999, and current assessment years fell within the permissible period of 10 years, therefore the provision of section 10B as it stood before its substitution, section 10B and explanation thereto had categorically held that manufacture include any ‘process’, therefore assessee is entitled exemption under section 10B. S. 10B : Newly established hundred per cent export oriented undertakings – Export Turnover – Foreign expenditure for self purpose – Turnover retained abroad

The assessee was engaged in the business of development of software by way of on site and off shore development and had a branch in USA for which separate accounts were maintained. The assessee claimed deduction under section 10B in respect of the exports of software made. In computing the export turnover, the Assessing Officer held that the amount of ` 3.33 crores incurred by the USA branch constituted "expenses incurred in foreign exchange in providing technical services outside India" and had to be deducted from the export turnover as provided under section 10B. He also held that the turnover of the USA branch to the extent of ` 15.14 crores had to be reduced from the export profits as it had not been received in convertible foreign exchange in India within the period specified in section 10B(3). On appeal CIT(A) upheld the claim of assessee with regard to ` 15.14 crores while rejected the claim with regard to ` 3.33 crores. The cross appeals of the parties were referred to Special Bench. The Special Bench referring the circular No. 621 dated 19-12-1991 and 694 dated 23-11-1994 held that expenditure incurred on site abroad is eligible for deduction under section 10B. As regards the turnover of ` 15.14 retained abroad, one limb of the Government cannot be allowed to defeat the operation of other limb. While section 10B requires the foreign exchange to be brought to India within the prescribed period, the RBI permits the assessee to retain the said foreign exchange abroad for specific purpose. RBI is the competent authority for section 10B as well. The result is that reinvestment of export earning is deemed to have been received in India and thereafter to have been repatriated abroad. S. 10B : Newly established hundred per cent export oriented undertakings – Declaration under section 10B(7) is directory not mandatory

- (a) Section 10B is a code by itself as it contains scheme of taxation formulated by the Govt. for taxability of units set up in the export processing zone.
- (b) Exemption under section 10B is available for five consecutive assessment years falling within the block of eight years beginning from the year in which the undertaking commences commercial production as specified by an assessee at his option. Therefore, once the period of five years is specified, it is irrevocable and therefore, the assessee cannot thereafter seek to change the five years period. Only condition is that the exemption cannot extend beyond the period of eight years from initial assessment year.
- (c) The requirement of filing declaration as per the provisions of section 10B(7) is directory in nature and not mandatory and therefore, it is open to an assessee not to claim tax holiday benefit under section 10B for any one year or more of the relevant block of five assessment years by filing declaration under section 10B(7). If the assessee opts out of the provisions of section 10B by filing declaration under section 10B(7) during the course of assessment proceeding of the relevant assessment year then in such case the revenue could not thrust the exemption upon the assessee. ### S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Contribution from institutional members [S. 13(1)(c)]

Assessee was set up under sponsorship of Government of India for sole purpose of providing physical environment to various institutions for carrying out their activities. Assessee claimed the exemption under section 11 which was granted by the Assessing Officer. Commissioner under section 263 set aside the order of Assessing Officer on grounds that institutional members fell within category of substantial contributors in terms of section 13(3) and since space in superstructure had been allotted to organizations below market price, provisions of section 13(1)(c) read with section 13(3)(b) were attracted and therefore the assessee was not entitled to exemption. The Tribunal reversed the finding of Commissioner. On appeal the Court held that in view of fact that funds received from institutional members were shown in balance sheet of assessee as liabilities and not as contributions towards "corpus", there is no violation of section 13(3). Since allotment of space was subject to approval of Government and was based on a self financing model, there could be no question of allotment of super structure at price below market price hence there is no violation of section 13(1)(c). ### S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Borrowed funds

The trust, the trust borrowed fund from the Bank for augmenting Income in order to carry out the objectives of the trust. The capital asset built with borrowed fund, under no circumstances, could be regarded to be outside the scope of its objectives. If raising of loan does not stand in the way of its charitable activities the repayment thereafter must be treated as application of its income. Hence, trust was eligible for exemption under section 11 of the I.T. Act, 1961. (A.Y. 1993-94)

S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Renting of building

The income derived from renting out the building was used for repayment of loans with the ultimate object of applying the income, after the loans had been fully repaid, towards charitable objects of the trust. Therefore the application of rental income for the repayment of loan was towards charitable object. Further, the rent received by the trust was more than the standard rent as computed under the rent control laws, as such, no benefit was derived by any interested person, therefore provisions of section 13(1)(c) were also not attracted. ### S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Delay in filing Form No. 10 [S. 139(1)]

The CIT rejected the application for condonation of delay in filing Form No. 10, before the expiry of time allowed under section 139 (1) of the Act, being notice for accumulation of income by the trust. On writ filed by the assessee trust the High Court considering the fact that the assessee was a State Government undertaking and has been registered under section 12A of the Act since many years and also the fact that the delay in filing Form No. 10 was because the chartered accountant of the trust was not able to finalize the accounts in time, the High Court quashed the order of the CIT and directed him to pass appropriate orders. ### S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Order giving effect to ITAT – Assessing Officer cannot reopen the entire assessment

In the present case the assessee incurred certain expenditure on a conference, the Assessing officer disallowed the expenditure relating to conference. However, the Assessing officer held that the assessee was entitled to exemption under section 11 of the Act. The Tribunal set aside the issue before it with regard to allowability of conference expenses, with certain directions for verifications. While giving effect to the Tribunal order the Assessing Officer however reopened the entire assessment and concluded that the assessee was not eligible for deduction under section 11 of the Act. On appeal the High Court held so far as the issue for exemption under section 11 was concerned it was already decided by the Assessing officer in his first assessment order and as such, that issue could not be reopened while giving effect to the order of the Tribunal. While giving effect to the order of the Tribunal, the Assessing Officer has to restrict himself only to the issue of allowability or not of the conference expenses and no other issues were open before it for consideration.

Assessee running a educational institutions was registered under section 12A. It had filed its Income-tax return declaring nil income. Assessee had given loan of ` 1.28 crores to another society which was also engaged in charitable activities of education. Assessing Officer and Commissioner (Appeals) held that as assessee had violated provisions of section 13(1)(d) invoked the provisions of section 11(5) and denied the exemption under sections 11 and 12. Tribunal held that assessee neither invested impugned amount nor deposited same otherwise than in any one of forms or modes specified in section (5) of section 11 because loan was neither an investment nor a deposit, provisions of section 13(1)(d) were not applicable hence the Assessing Officer was directed to allow the exemption (A. S. 11 : Charitable or religious purposes – Survey – Capitation fee – Voluntary contribution – In Voluntary contributions – Denial of exemption [S. 12]

During survey Assessing Officer observed that assessee had collected capitation fee from students and no receipt were given for such collection. Assessing Officer was of the view that what is exempted from taxation under sections 11 and 12 were are only voluntary contributions and not contributions collected against allotment of seats. However, there was no material on record to show that assessee had accepted capitation fee against allotment of seats, in view of decision of earlier year the exemption was allowed. The Tribunal further held that there is no difference between voluntary contributions and involuntary contributions, only distinction is that voluntary contributions are to be treated as income under section 12 and corpus donations are to be treated as capital receipt under section 11. If the said income is applied for the charitable purpose the exemption to be allowed. (A.Ys. 2002-03 to 2008-09).

Advance paid by assessee an educational institution registered under section 12A, to a club towards membership fee for providing certain amenities to the staff and students of the assessee did not attract the provisions of section 13(1)(c) r.w.s. 13(2)(a) as the said club is not a prohibited person as specified in section 13(3). Provisions of section 13(1)(d) were also not attracted as the said advance was neither a deposit nor an investment and therefore, exemption under section 11 is allowable to the assessee more so when the Assessing Officer has allowed assessee's claim of exemption under section 11 on the same set of facts in the preceding year. S. 12A : Trust or institution – Charitable purposes – Contributions – Exempt incomes – Registration – Deemed grant of registration

Non – consideration of application for registration of charitable trust under section 12A of the Act by the Income-tax authorities within the time fixed under section 12AA(2) of the Act would result in deemed grant of registration to the trust. The Court further, observed that the deemed registration granted to the trust may at worst cause loss of some revenue or tax payable by an assessee, on the other hand taking a contrary view and holding that not taking a decision within time fixed by section 12AA would mean leaving the assessee totally at the mercy of Income tax authorities as the Act does not provide any remedy for such non decision.

S. 12A : Trust or institution – Charitable purposes – Contributions – Exempt incomes – Stock exchange – Benefit to individual stock broker or members or employees – No exemption

When a stock exchange carries out any activity for sole benefit of its members or ex members or employees or ex employees or their dependents and not for benefit of general public which is distinguished from class or community consisting of its members, ex-members, employees or ex-employees or their dependents and connections, it would not be entitled for exemption under section 11. Members of exchange being integral part of constitution of exchange are interested persons as per provisions of section 13(1)(c). They are precluded from taking any undue advantages from assessee exchange. Assessee being registered under section 12A, benefit of assessee–exchange would be for public at large and not for benefit of individual stock brokers or members of Governing body of stock exchange. Since the assessee incurred expenditure for benefit of its members and subsidiary company only, provisions of section 13(1)(c) read with sections 13(2)(b) and 13(3)(cc) was applicable to fact of case and consequently, assessee was not entitled for exemption under section 11. #### S. 12A : Trust or institution – Charitable purposes – Contributions – Exempt incomes – Registration of Trust [S. 80G]

Application for renewal of exemption certificate rejected for the reason that changes made in object clause of trust without following the required procedure made the trust invalid. The Tribunal observed that only one addition was made in the object clause, and even that remained charitable and did not cause any detriment to original object. There was no statutory requirement of intimating the changes except the one mentioned in the Form 10A, and even there was no time limit. Held that revenue was not justified in refusing to renew exemption certificate.

Section 12AA : Procedure for registration.

S. 12AA : Trust or institution – Registration – Charitable purposes – Exempt incomes – Registration granted under section 12A cannot be withdrawn in section 12AA(3)

Assessee trust got registration under 12A in December 1974 and on that basis got exemption of income tax for the A.Ys 1996-97 to 2005-06. DIT (Exemptions) denied exemption and cancelled registration under section 12AA(3) with effect from assessment year 2002-03. The Court held that registration granted under section 12A in December 1974 to assessee could not be withdrawn. (A.Ys. 2002-03 to 2006-07)

S. 12AA : Trust or institution – Registration – Charitable purposes – Exempt incomes –Educational institutions on commercial line [S. 2(15), 11, 12]

Assessee trust was formed to run educational institutions. It applied for registration under section 12AA. DIT(E) rejected the application on ground that probable fees to be collected from students was having a component for future expansion of institution and same component was in nature of profit and thus ,objects of trust would also include profit motive. The Tribunal held that since the object of trust was to establish a number of educational institutions in a brand name and run those institutions on commercial line, it could not be regarded as charitable activity, therefore, DIT (Exemption) was justified in rejecting assessee's application seeking registration under section 12AA.

S. 12AA : Trust or institution – Registration – Charitable purposes – Exempt incomes

The DIT refused to grant registration for the reason that the assessee was claiming exemption under section 11 even though it had not complied with the mandatory provisions of registration. According to it, the lapse by the assessee cannot be visited with the consequence of its being declined registration later also, which approach was not supported either by any specific legal provisions or plain logic or rationale. The DIT was only required to examine if the objects of the trust were charitable and the activities were bona fide.

S. 12AA : Trust or institution – Registration – Charitable purposes – Exempt incomes

While granting registration to a Charitable Trust or institution, the powers of the CIT are limited to examination as to whether or not the objects of the trust are charitable in nature and examination about the genuineness of the activities, when genuineness of the activities is not in doubt, the CIT was not justified in refusing the registration under section 12AA, on irrelevant grounds.

The assessee was religious trust for benefit of Dawoodi Bohra community. The assessee contended that said section 13(1)(b) would not be applicable to religious trust. The Tribunal held that since the benefit of Trust was available to all persons of Dawoodi Bohra community i.e., benefit was available to a section of people and was not confined to some specific individuals, it could not be said that assessee trust was established for private religious purpose, therefore assessee is entitled for registration.

The assessee trust were formed for charitable and religious purposes, the beneficiaries of the trust were the financially poor minorities and other back ward classes in Tellicherry Municipality and its suburbs. The Assessee applied for registration under section 12A. The Commissioner found that the trust was established for the benefit of a particular religious community or caste and thus hit by section 13(1)(b). It was further held that Explanation (2) below section 13(7), which provides an exception to section 13(1)(b) for schedule castes, backward class schedule tribes or women and children, would not be applicable in the instant case as the word "minority" cannot be categorized as either scheduled caste or backward community. He accordingly, rejected assessee's application for grant of registration. The Tribunal held that by reading the Trust deed as a whole the word 'Minority' to mean the religious minorities hence section 13(1)(b) would stand automatically attracted, hence the order of Commissioner was upheld.

For pre A.Y. 2008-09, the assessee earned tax free dividend income from investments in units, bonds, shares, etc. The assessee did not maintain separate books of account for tax free securities but claimed that the same had been invested from its own funds and no part of the interest paid by the assessee on its borrowings together with the administrative expenses could be disallowed. Assessing Officer took the view that the interest paid on borrowings and administrative expenses could be disallowed under section 14A. On appeal, the Tribunal held that as no rule had been made prescribed for computing the disallowance no disallowance under section 14A could be made. On appeal by the department, the Court held that in the absence of any precise formula for proportionate disallowance, no disallowance is called for in respect of administrative cost attributable to earning of tax free income until Rule 8D came in to force.

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Despite Proviso to section 14A, disallowance can be made for earlier years –Revision was held justified [S. 263]

Partners of a firm, were assessed to tax in their individual capacity and the Assessing Officer gave deduction of interest paid on borrowings for investment in firm, the Court held that Commissioner was justified in holding that after insertion of section 14A, interest payable on amount invested in a partnership firm could not be allowed as deduction. The protection of proviso to section 14A w.r.t. A.Y. 2001-02 & earlier years was inserted w.e.f. 11/05/2001. Thus, where order of CIT under section 263 was passed earlier i.e. on 29/12/1999, proviso to section 14A could not be invoked against said order as on date of order of Commissioner passed under section 263 and proviso was not in existence. S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Real expenditure – Only real expenditure can be disallowed [Rule 8D]

The High Court had to consider two issues: (a) whether interest paid on funds borrowed to acquire “trading shares” is hit by section 14A given that the profits there from are assessable to tax as “business profits” and the dividend is incidental and (b) whether Rule 8D has retrospective operation. Held by the Court:

- (i) The argument that if the dominant and main objective of the expenditure was not the earning of ‘exempt’ income then, the expenditure cannot be disallowed under section 14A is not acceptable. The expression “in relation to” cannot be given a narrow meaning and simply means “in connection with” or “pertaining to”. If the expenditure has a relation or connection with or pertains to exempt income, it cannot be allowed as a deduction even if it otherwise qualifies under the other provisions of the Act;
- (ii) The expression “expenditure incurred” in section 14A refers to actual expenditure and not to some imagined expenditure. If no expenditure is incurred in relation to the exempt income, no disallowance can be made under section 14A (Hero Cycles Ltd. (2010) 323 ITR 518 referred).
- (iii) The Assessing Officer cannot proceed to determine the amount of expenditure incurred in relation to exempt income without recording a finding that he is not satisfied with the correctness of the claim of the assessee. This is a condition precedent. While rejecting the claim of the assessee with regard to the expenditure or no expenditure in relation to exempt income, the Assessing Officer will have to indicate cogent reasons for the same;
- (iv) Rule 8D comes into play only when the Assessing Officer records a finding that he is not satisfied with the assessee’s method. Though sections 14A(2) & (3) were inserted w.e.f. 1.4.1962, Rule 8D was inserted on 24.03.2008. Accordingly, Rule 8D would operate prospectively. (Godrej and Boyce Mfg. Co. Ltd. v. Dy. CIT (2010) 328 ITR 81 (Bom) followed);
- (v) For periods prior to Rule 8D, the Assessing Officer will have to adopt a reasonable method on the basis of objective criteria to determine the expenditure. However, here also, he will have to show why he is not satisfied with the correctness of the assessee’s claim (argument that Rule 8D exceeds the mandate of section 14A left open).

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempted income – Interest paid

Assessee bank borrowed certain funds, which were invested in purchase of tax free bonds for meeting SLR requirement of RBI. Assessing Officer disallowed the interest under section 14A. The Tribunal deleted the disallowance. On appeal High Court held that the object or purpose of investment does not affect operation of section 14A in as much as any expenditure incurred for earning tax free income is not an allowable expenditure, therefore, even though purchase of tax free bonds was for meeting SLR requirements, interest and other expenses incurred on borrowals for investment in tax free bonds was to be disallowed.

Assessee made investment for earning tax free income from mix funds and it is not possible to ascertain as to whether the investment in tax free was out of assessee's own funds and the Assessing having not established the nexus between the borrowed funds and investment in tax free funds disallowance on pro rata basis was not proper. #### S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Interest – Trading

In case of assessee engaged in trading and investment of shares and received tax-free dividend income of in A.Y. 2004-05, it was held by Tribunal that Rule 8D does not apply prior to A.Y. 2008-09 (Godrej & Boyce Mfg. Co. Ltd. (2010) 328 ITR 81 (Bom.) followed). It was further observed that the expression "in relation to" in section 14A means dominant and immediate connection or nexus with the exempt income. In order to disallow expenditure under section 14A, there must be a live nexus between the expenditure incurred and the tax-free income. Disallowance cannot be made on presumptions and estimation by the Assessing Officer. When it is possible to determine the actual expenditure "in relation to" the exempt income or where no expenditure is incurred "in relation to" the exempt income, the principle of apportionment embedded in section 14A has no application. #### S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – "Depreciation"

It was held that section 14A permits disallowance of "expenditure incurred by the assessee" and not of "allowance admissible" to him. There is a distinction between "expenditure" and "allowance". The expression "expenditure" does not include allowances such as depreciation allowance. Accordingly, depreciation cannot be the subject matter of disallowance under section 14A (ratio of Nectar Beverages P. Ltd. v. Dy. CIT (2009) 314 ITR 314 (SC) followed);

Similarly, it was further held that the deduction under section 80D is not expenditure for earning tax-free income but is a permissible deduction from gross total income under Chapter VIA. (A.Y. 2003-04)

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Separate Books – Personal tax free investment

The assessee is maintaining separate books of account for the purpose of business. The tax-free investments are in his personal capacity. As the Assessing Officer has not disallowed any expenditure of personal nature out of the business income, the expenditure claimed in the business of share dealings cannot be correlated to the incomes earned in personal capacity that too on dividend, PPF interest and tax free interest on RBI bonds. Accordingly, the estimation of expenditure of ` 20,000 out of business expenditure as being incurred for earning tax free income is not acceptable.

In A.Y. 2007-08, the assessee received dividend in respect of investment in shares made in earlier years. No investments were made during the year. It was claimed that the investment in the earlier years was made out of reserves & surplus and that there was no expenditure incurred during the year to earn the dividend. The Assessing Officer held that as in the earlier years, the assessee had borrowed funds, section 14A applied. It was held that if there is no nexus between borrowed funds and investments made in purchase of shares, disallowance under section 14A is not warranted. (A.Y. 2007-08).

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Rule 8D to show how assessee's method is incorrect

It is a pre-requisite that before invoking Rule 8D, the Assessing Officer must record his satisfaction on how the assessee's calculation is incorrect. The Assessing Officer cannot apply Rule 8D without pointing out any inaccuracy in the method of apportionment or allocation of expenses. Further, the onus is on the Assessing Officer to show that expenditure has been incurred by the assessee for earning tax-free income. Without discharging the onus, the Assessing Officer is not entitled to make an ad hoc disallowance. A clear finding of incurring of expenditure is necessary. No disallowance can be made on the basis of presumptions. (A.Y. 2008-09)

On facts of the assessee, assessment proceedings were initially completed under section 143(1). Subsequently Assessing Officer initiated reassessment proceedings in course of which he made certain disallowance under section 14A. Assessee claimed that no expenditure was incurred for earning tax free income. Assessing Officer held that some expenditure must have been incurred to earn the Rule 8D does not apply to A.Y. 2006-07. The assessee has urged that no expenditure has been identified to have been incurred to exempt income. Neither the Assessing Officer nor the CIT(A) has rebutted this submission. The Assessing Officer made an ad hoc estimate which is not sustainable in the light of Hero Cycles. Accordingly, in view of Vegetable Products 88 ITR 192 where it was held that if two constructions are possible, one favouring the assessee should be adopted, the precedent laid down in Hero Cycles should be followed. S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – A disallowance of interest – Used of own funds to repay loans & not invest in shares

In view of Godrej Boyce Mfg. Co. 328 ITR 81 (Bom.) Rule 8D is applicable only prospectively i.e. from A.Y. 2008-09 and not for earlier years. The facts showed that the assessee had made the investment in shares out of its own funds and the borrowed funds were entirely utilized for the purpose of its business. The investment in shares in the current year was made from a separate bank account where the surplus funds generated in that year were deposited. The argument that the assessee could have utilized its surplus funds in repaying the borrowings instead of investing in shares and by not doing so, there was diversion of borrowed funds towards investment in shares to earn dividend income is not acceptable in view of CIT v. Hero Cycles Ltd 323 ITR 518 where it was held, distinguishing Abhishek Industries 286 ITR 1 (P&H), that if investment in shares is made by an assessee out of own funds and not out of borrowed funds, disallowance under section 14A is not sustainable. Accordingly, the disallowance of interest on borrowed funds was deleted. (A.Y. 2005-06)

No disallowance can be made under section 14A of interest on borrowed funds where in case of mixed funds, it is not possible to ascertain whether the investment in tax free bonds is out of the assessee's own funds, the source of investment in the tax free bonds is identified, and the Assessing Officer failed to establish any nexus between the borrowed funds and the investments in the tax free bonds. As also the cash flow of the assessee was not seen.

Therefore, the apportionment on a pro rata basis was improper in the absence of anything brought by the Assessing Officer to rebut the assessee's stand that the investment in the tax free bonds had been made out of the funds of own funds (Minda Investments, Hero Cycles 323 ITR 518 (P&H) and Winsome Textile Industries 319 ITR 204 (P&H) followed). S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempted income – Correlation

In absence of correlation of any expenditure incurred in earning exempt income, there cannot be disallowance under section 14A. (A.Y. 2004-05)

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Absence of exempt income

When the expenditure of interest is incurred in relation to income which does not form part of total income, it has to suffer the disallowance irrespective of the fact whether any income is earned by the assessee or not. Section 14A does not envisage any such exception. This is even if the interest paid on borrowings for the purchase of share were allowable under section 57 as an expenditure incurred for earning an income or under section 36(1)(iii) or under section 37 as an expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively, for the purposes of business. The term 'in relation to' is wide enough to include in its sweep the expenditure both "for making or earning income" and "incurred wholly and exclusively for the purposes of business carried on by the assessee." What one has to see is whether any expenditure were incurred by an assessee in relation to an income that does not form part of total income of the assessee under the Act, and if the answer is in affirmative then that expenditure cannot be allowed irrespective of the fact that it was allowable under different provisions of the Act. Further, disallowance has to be of the entire amount of the expenditure so related and cannot be reduced by the receipt of interest which has no relation to such expenditure. (A.Y. 2004-05)

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Shares – Income from firm

It is not possible to hold the view that share income in the hands of partner of a partnership firm is altogether tax free. It is held that share of profit in the hands of a partner is income which has suffered tax in the hands of the firm and found that the share of profit from the firm is exempt from tax under section 10(2A) not in absolute sense but with a view to avoid double taxation. Accordingly, section 14A is not applicable to the facts of the case.

S. 14A : Expenditure disallowance – Exempt income – Acquire controlling interest

There was indirect nexus between interest bearing loans and investment in equity shares to acquire controlling interest. It was not engaged in trading of shares either in the preceding year or in the relevant year. Merely because the assessee has shown the investment in shares as stock-in-trade in the balance sheet by itself would not prove that the assessee was doing business or trading activity of dealing in shares. Merely because assessee did not earn dividend out of investment in certain shares did not imply that S. 14A would not supply to that extent. S. 14A is applicable. Assessee company having utilized unsecured loans for investment in shares of group companies to acquire controlling interest, and did not enter into any transaction of trading or dealing of such shares, it could not be held that the investment was made for carrying on business, or trading of shares and therefore provisions of s. 14A are applicable and assessee is not entitled for deduction of interest under section 36(1)(iii). #### S. 15 : Salaries – Deferred contingent payments – Share purchase agreement – Incentive remuneration – Capital gains [S. 28(va), 48]

Capital gains on transfer of shares in Indian company accruing to non-resident shareholder. Indian company and all its shareholders, including non-resident applicant entered into an agreement to transfer its entire business and share capital in favour a Netherlands company, consideration for which was payable partly as fixed amount referred to as 'closing amount' and balance as deferred contingent payments that were based on achieving EBITDA targets. AAR observed that a combined reading of the employment agreement, non-competition agreement and the share purchase agreement which are contemporaneous left it in no doubt to conclude that contingent payments payable under the share purchase agreement, are in substance and reality payments for ensuring performance under the employment agreement to achieve the desired object in exceeding EBITDA and have no real nexus to the consideration for the sale of the shares etc. under the purchase agreement – Hence held that closing payment under Share Purchase Agreement is the true and full value of consideration for ascertaining capital gains tax and Deferred Contingent payments under the Agreement were in the nature of incentive remuneration falling within the purview of Salary.

S. 17(2) : Salary – Perquisite – Profits in lieu of salary – Employees Stock Option (ESOP) – Warrant

Under a scheme, the warrants were issued to the employees and the employees had to retain the warrant for a minimum of 12 months and then the shares were allotted for a consideration which was again subject to the lock in period during which it was held in the trust only. The Supreme Court held that the issue of warrant was a mere right without an obligation to buy and therefore "perquisite" could not be said to have accrued at the time when warrants were granted. And as the shares were having a lock in period, the benefit which arose on the date when the option stood exercised was only a notional benefit whose value was unascertainable and therefore not taxable.

The Supreme Court further held that sub clause (iiia) of section 17(2) which was inserted w.e.f. April 1, 2000, was prospective and could not be held to be retrospective. (A.Ys. 1997-98 to 1999-2000)

S. 17(2) : Salary – Perquisite – Profits in lieu of salary – Salary from two employers – Fair rent – Rent Control Act – Notional interest on deposit [S. 15, Rule 3]

Where the assessee has received salary from two employers entire salary has to be considered while determining value of perquisite.

As the paid-up capital of employer was more than ` 1 crore, accommodation in question was exempt from the provisions of Rent Control Act, and in such situation, fair rental value of accommodation could not be limited to standard rent, therefore in addition to monthly rent a sum equivalent to notional interest on deposits kept with landlord had to be taken in to account in computing fair rent in order to determine perquisite value of accommodation in hands of employee. #### S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Notional Interest – Deposit – Municipal ratable value – For annual value under section 23, notional interest on deposit not includible. Municipal value is ordinarily ALV for section 23 though Assessing Officer entitled to depart for sufficient cause

Section 23(1)(a) requires determination of the "fair rent" being "the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to let from year to year". If on inquiry Assessing Officer finds that the actual rent received is less than the "fair/market rent" because the assessee has received abnormally high interest free security deposit, he can undertake necessary exercise in that behalf. However, by no stretch of imagination, the notional interest on the interest free security can be taken as determinative factor to arrive at the "fair rent". The ALV fixed by the Municipal Authorities can be the basis of adopting the ALV for purposes of section 23. Also in determining the reasonable/fair rent, extraneous circumstances may inflate/deflate the "fair rent." (A. Y. 2001-02)

S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Annual rateable value – Standard rent

The assessee before the Hon'ble High Court contended that the Assessing Officer cannot treat the fair market rent as a notional figure under section 23(1). If actual rent is not accepted the standard rent should be adopted as rent. The Hon'ble Court observed that the Assessing Officer is duty bound to calculate the standard rent of a property under section 23.

S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Property let-out – Licencee – Sub-let Higher value – Tax planning transaction not “Sham” if parties assessed – Double taxation

The assessee let out its premises to Minicon pursuant to a leave and license agreement. Minicon thereafter let out the said premises to various third parties. One director was common between the assessee and Minicon. It was held that save and except the fact that one of the directors of the assessee company was also a director in Minicon, there is nothing on record to show that the transaction between the assessee and Minicon is a sham transaction. Accordingly, the decision of the Tribunal that the amounts received by Minicon on account of letting out the premises is liable to be assessed in the hands of the assessee on the ground that the transaction between the assessee and Minicon is a sham and bogus transaction cannot be accepted. *CIT v. ### S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Fair rental value – Interest free deposit

Benefit derived by assessee from interest free deposit can be taken into consideration for determination of fair rental value under section 23(1)(a) but the benefit derived should not be more than market lending rate. Since, the property in question was not subject to Rent Control Act, annual letting value was not to be restricted to standard rent as per Rent Control Act. (A.Ys. 2000-01, 2002-03, 2003-04)

S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Notional rent – Interest free deposit

For applying provisions of section 23(1)(a) of the Act, municipal valuation/ ratable value should be the determining factor. Since the rent received by the assessee was more than the sum for which the property might reasonably be expected to be let from year to year, the actual rent received should be the annual value of the property under section 23(1)(b) of the Act. Notional interest on interest – free security deposit/rent received in advance should not be added to the same.

S. 23 : Income from house property – Annual value – Not bound by standard rent, rateable value & can adjust if interest-free deposit reason for low actual rent

It was held that for purpose of determining the ALV under section 23(1)(a) the Assessing Officer has to determine the fair / reasonable rent expected to be fetched by the property. Various factors must be considered by Assessing Officer. Therefore,

Notional Interest on interest free security cannot be considered as determinative factor to arrive at fair rent. In the instant case, the matter was remanded back as no inquiry was made by Assessing Officer to determine fair rent under section 23(1)(a). (A.Ys. 1992-93, 1993-94)

The fact of the actual sale price of the property, the implication of the contradictory statement made by the seller of the property and whether reliance can be placed on the loose sheet recovered in the course of raid are all questions of fact and therefore, no substantial question of law arises therefrom.

The Supreme Court incidentally held that quoting from an order of some authority, particularly a specialized one, cannot per se be faulted as this procedure can often help in making for brevity and precision. But to the extent that any borrowed words are used in a judgment, they must be acknowledged as such in the appropriate manner as a courtesy to the true authors.

S. 28(i) : Business income – Business loss – Confiscation of stock-in-trade – Illegal business

Explanation to section 37 has no relevance in case of allowability of business loss. The assessee was a medical practitioner. Some heroin was seized from him which formed part of his stock-in-trade. The Court held that once the heroin formed part of stock-in-trade, it follows that the seizure and confiscation of such stock-in-trade has to be allowed as a business loss. The Supreme Court further held that law is different from morality and a case is to be decided by courts on legal principles and not on one's own moral views. (A.Y. 1986-87)

S. 28(i) : Business income – Business Loss – Bad debt – Claim for “Business loss” maintainable – Website Development Expense is not Capital Expenditure [S. 37(1)]

(i) Though the claim for write off of advance as a ‘bad debt’ is not allowable, the assessee was entitled under Rule 27 to support the CIT(A)’s order on the ground that the amount should be allowed as a ‘business loss’. The subject-matter of an appeal should be understood not in a narrow and unrealistic manner but should be so comprehended as to encompass the entire controversy between the parties which is to be adjudicated upon by the Tribunal. Such a claim can be considered provided no new facts are needed (Edward Keventer 123 ITR 200 (Delhi) & Gilbert & Barker 111 ITR 529 (Bom.) followed);

- (ii) On merits, the department's argument that the amounts paid for development of websites cannot be allowed as business loss because if the websites had been successfully put up, the expenditure would have been capital expenditure is not acceptable. because (a) as the expenditure was abortive, no capital asset has in fact been acquired and (b) even if the website had materialized, it does not result in an advantage of an enduring nature or in the capital field as it is only for the day-to-day running of the business and provision of information.

The Tribunal also held that the treatment in the books of an assessee is not conclusive. (A.Y. 2005-06).

Assessee, his wife and son jointly purchased land on 2nd March, 1997, and soon thereafter applied for converting the same into housing plots though sanction was given by the concerned development authority in 2001. They sold all the eight plots during the financial year 2004-05. Co-owners of the assessee have no record of carrying on of agricultural operations. Two of the three co-owners are engaged in the business of automobile spare parts. Even though the conversion of land materialized in the year 2001 only, in the absence of any evidence to show that the land was used for some other purpose prior to seeking approval of the layout plan, the intention of purchase of land cannot be automatically inferred as an investment. Thus, the attendant circumstances of the case lead to the conclusion that the land was purchased with the intention to sell the same at a profit. Therefore, though an isolated transaction, it was an adventure in the nature of trade and the income therefrom has to be treated as business income. (A.Y. 2005-06)

S. 28(i) : Business income – Business loss – Exchange fluctuation loss on pending forward contract is an “accrued” loss

The assessee a foreign bank carrying on business in India, entered into forward contracts with its clients to buy or sell foreign exchange at an agreed price on a future date. On the date of maturity, the contract was executed which resulted in either profits or losses to the assessee. There was no dispute that the loss was on revenue account and that loss arising on execution of the contracts in the same year were allowable as deduction. With respect to contracts where the date of maturity fell beyond the accounting period, the assessee valued the forward contracts on the last of the accounting period on the basis of rate of foreign exchange prevailing on that date and accounted for loss or profit as the case may be. The Assessing Officer taxed the profits on such contracts, though he disallowed the losses on the ground that they were "notional" or "contingent" loss or whether it was an "accrued" loss held deciding in favour of the assessee. ### S. 28(i) : Business income – Capital gains – Sale of shares – Large volume [S. 45]

While volume of transactions is an important indicator of the intention of the assessee whether to deal in shares as trading asset or to hold the shares as investor, it is certainly not the sole criterion. The Assessing Officer's conclusion that since sale and purchase had been determined by the volatility in the market, the same is against the basic feature of investor is not based on sound rational reasoning. A prudent investor always keeps a watch on the market trends and, therefore, is not barred under law from liquidating his investments in shares. The law itself has recognized this fact by taxing these transactions under the head "Short Term Capital Gains". If the Assessing Officer's reasoning is accepted, then it would be against the legislative intent itself; Some part of the STCG had arisen out the earlier investment which had been accepted as being on investment account. As the modus operandi of the assessee remained the same in regard to other shares purchased during the year, the assessee's claim could not be negated only on the basis of frequency of the transaction. #### S. 28(i) : Business income – Capital gains – Sale of shares – Multiple orders [S. 45]

The Assessing Officer had not correctly calculated the number of transactions because sometimes a single transaction is split by the computers trading of the stock exchanges into many smaller transactions but that does not mean that assessee has carried so many transactions. If someone places an order for purchase of 1,000 shares and the same is executed by the electronic trading system of stock exchange into 100 smaller transactions, it does not mean that 100 transactions have been entered into. The assessee had carried out only 31 purchase and 25 sale transactions which cannot be said to be a great volume of transactions.

At the end of the year, the assessee was holding shares worth ` 11.56 crores with a market value of ` 17.69 crores. If assessee was a trader, he would have definitely realized the huge profit of almost ` 6 crores immediately and not carried out the stock to the next year.

The transactions in which no delivery was taken and it was settled in the same day appear to be cases where the particulars were wrongly carried out on behalf of the assessee by the broker & that's why assessee got them settled on the same day.

The assessee has not borrowed any money and he was occupied full time in the business of garments.

S. 28(i) : Business income – Capital gains – Shares – Short period of holding – Share broker [S. 45]

The intention with which an assessee starts his activity is the most important factor. If shares are purchased from own funds, with a view to keep the funds in equity shares to earn considerable return on account of enhancement in the value of share over a period then merely because the assessee liquidates its investment within six months or eight months would not lead to the conclusion that the assessee had no intention to keep the funds as invested in equity shares but was actually intended to trade in shares. Mere intention to liquidate the investment at higher value does not imply that the intention was only to trade in security. However, it cannot be held that in all circumstances if assessee has used its own funds for share activity then it would only lead to inference of investment being the sole intention. In such circumstances, frequency of transactions will have to be considered to arrive at proper conclusion regarding the true intention of the assessee. However, if the assessee, on the other hand, borrows funds for making investment in shares then definitely it is a very important indicator of its intention to trade in shares;

On facts, the Assessing Officer proceeded on the assumption that borrowed funds had been utilized for buying shares on the ground that funds were common and could not be segregated. However, it was categorically pointed out before the CIT(A) that no part of the borrowed funds was utilized for acquisition of shares on investment account. Nothing was brought on record by the department to controvert this fact. (A.Y. 2005-06)

S. 28(i) : Business income – Services of Operating and Maintenance of power station – Permanent Establishment – DTAA – India-UK [S. 9, 44AD, Art. 5, 7 and 13]

Assessee entered into a contract with Spectrum Ltd., for rendering services of operating and maintenance of power station owned by it. Activity of operating of power station was treated by assessee as its business activity carried on through a project office in India, which in turn, constituted its permanent establishment in India in terms of Article 5 of Indo-UK DTAA. According to assessee, income arising to it from said business activity was its business profit and was liable to tax on net basis. Income received by assessee for executing works contract did not fall within definition of "fees for technical services" (FTS) under explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vii) nor as defined in Art. 13(4) of DTAA between India and UK. Moreover, since assessee had not made available any technical knowledge, skill, etc., to spectrum within meaning assigned to FTS under Article 13(4)(c) of DTAA, it could not be taxed on gross basis and section 44AD had no application to facts of instant case. Further more Article 13(4)(c) read with Article 26 of DTAA would not permit revenue authorities to discriminate against, a UK registered company and accord it less favourable treatment than a domestic company and therefore section 44AD could not be invoked in assessee's case. Assessee, in terms of agreement, advanced interest-free loan to borrower at his request on the condition that advanced amount should be utilised for purchasing LML shares and that dividend income received on such shares should be paid by the borrower to assessee to extent of 50%. Thus, on the facts & circumstances, it was merely a loan transaction and consideration was 50% of dividend income instead of regular payment of interest. However, the dividend received by the borrower could not be treated as dividend income as the borrower was holding shares in the capacity of borrower and not as a beneficial owner of those shares, and therefore, it was held that the 50% retained by the assessee was assessable as Business Income. In order to determine whether there was business or not, issue cannot be decided from narrow angle as to whether or not object was to sell commodity at enhanced price. In today's scenario it would be unrealistic to see a business operation only from narrow angle of difference between selling price and purchase price as there may be systematic and prolonged activity of loss making keeping in view overall business strategy and long-term – prospects. In a business transaction there could be various considerations. (A.Ys. 2000-01-02)

S. 28(i) : Business income – Business expenditure – Business setting up of – Purchase of existing new business

If an existing running business is taken over by a new company with an object to complete the same and the same new company undertakes new project then it has to be said that the business is already commenced. The tax authorities are wrong in holding that new company's business had not commenced till the entire expansion of the business is complete.

If an existing undertaking is purchased by a new assessee, it does not mean that the new assessee has not commenced its business. Thus where the assessee corporation was formed for completion of already existing projects or for further entrusted projects, and the assessee had commenced its entrusted activities, merely because the assessee had taken over entrusted activities it did not mean that assessee had not commenced business and, therefore, with commencement of entrusted activities, the assessee was held to have commenced its business. S. 28(i) : Business income – Capital gains – Purchase and sale of shares [S. 45]

For deciding the nature of income no general principle can be laid down, but totality of the circumstances has to be considered. Considering the frequency of purchase and sale of shares, it was clear that assessee investment company held shares as business assets but disclosed the same as Investment in the Balance sheet for complying RBI Guidelines, hence profits from their sales was assessable as business income and not as capital gain. Tribunal has considered the following factors (i) systematic and continuous activity of purchase and sale of shares in furtherance of object in memorandum of association (ii) it has been raising substantial loans and public deposits and has been utilizing it for purchase of shares (iii) Object of purchases and sale of shares was not to earn dividends (iv) Assessee was having substantial nature of purchase and sale of shares and turnover (v) Assessee was purchasing and selling the shares since incorporation. (vi) there was enormity and frequency of purchase and sales. (vii) Assessee was disclosing the purchases and sale of shares as business income in subsequent years which had been accepted by the Revenue. (A.Y. 2000-01)

FII is trading in derivatives on Indian Stock exchanges and contends that the income derived from the derivatives trading should be treated as its business income – Authority examined whether it is in nature of revenue receipt or capital receipt. AAR observed that derivatives value is derived from underlying variables like asset, index or reference rate, they do not have either voting rights or right to control, there is no pride of possession of derivatives, they also do not involve initial investment; they are priced by reference to value derived from an underlying index, commodity or other asset and their value fluctuates with the market movement of the aforementioned items; also the applicant purchases and sells derivatives and sometimes first sells and then purchases them and this ordinarily does not happen in share and other securities; they have a short life of about 3 months, they do not yield any income like dividend, therefore, investment of money in them with a view to derive any income is not feasible; further details on record indicate substantial magnitude of transactions. On these facts, AAR stated that it cannot but be said that the income from transactions of trading in derivative is 'business income' and not 'capital gains'; further, to tax business income, there should be a PE in India as per Article 7, but it is clear that the broker, custodian and banker are acting in the ordinary course of business and their activities are not devoted wholly or almost wholly on behalf of applicant - Hence held to be business income as derivatives are in nature of stock in trade and not securities and hence not capital assets and not taxable in India as per provisions of DTAA.

In a case where assessee exporter by utilising import licence, actually imports goods at concessional rate of duty, imported goods become purchases and question of profit can arise only when they are actually sold and income is realized. But, where imports are not directly made by holder of import entitlement and licences are actually transferred to out side parties at premium, income accrues at time of transfer of import entitlement and not when such import entitlements are acquired or held by assessee. Thus mere holding of licence at year end without transfer does not amount to accrual of income. (A.Y. 1996-97)

The fact that assessee effected exports in a year or it passed an entry in accounts recognizing amount of duty draw back does not entitle it to income to that extent: The right is translated into accrual of income only when a claim is lodged with competent authority. S. 28(iv) : Business income – Business loss – Benefit or perquisite – Waiver of loan by bank [S. 2 (24), 41(1)]

The assessee was not trading in money transactions. A grant of loan by a bank cannot be termed a trading transaction nor construed to be in the course of business. Indisputably, the assessee obtained the loan for the purpose of investing in capital assets. A part of this loan with interest was waived under agreement between the parties. The amount referable to the loans obtained by the assessee towards the purchase of its capital asset could not constitute a trading receipt. Therefore, the facts were totally different from the facts in CIT v. T. V. Sundaram Iengar and Sons Ltd. (1996) 222 ITR 344 (SC). (A.Y. 2001-02).

Whereas, if the loan was taken for a trading purpose and was treated as such from the very beginning in the books of account, its waiver would result in income more so when it was transferred to the P&L A/c in view of *CIT v. S. 28(va) : Business income – Non-compete fees – Compensation for not carrying on activity in relation to any business for a period of 11 years – Capital gains [S. 45]

The assessee was one of the promoters of "TP Ltd." and together with other promoters held substantial shares in the company. By an agreement "I Ltd." (Acquirer) agreed to purchase share holding of the assessee along with other promoters of "TP Ltd". The Acquirer with a view to ensure that the promoters after sale of the shares did not indulge in competing business entered into a non compete agreement whereby the assessee was paid ` 2 crores for agreeing not to carry on or be engaged, concerned or interested in any competing business for a period of 11 years. The assessee treated the said receipts as capital receipt. The Assessing Officer held that the receipt in question was a fee received for not carrying out any activity in relation to any business and therefore, chargeable to tax under section 28(va). The Tribunal held that for proviso (i) to section 28(va)(a) to apply there must be transfer of the right to carry on any business. The assessee in the instant case was not carrying on any business on his own but was the promoter and director of the company whose shares were purchased by the acquirer. The provisions of section 45 would get attracted only when there is a capital gains arising as a result of transfer of a capital asset. The definition of transfer in given in section 2(47). In a agreement by which the assessee refrained from indulging in a business competing with the promoter, there cannot be transfer in any modes set out in section 2(47) therefore the payments on account of non-compete fee cannot be brought to tax under section 45 hence in the instant case the proviso (i) to section 28(va)(a) will not apply. Consequently the receipt in question would be chargeable to tax as business income and not capital gains, accordingly the order of Commissioner was upheld. (A. Y. 2007-08).

S. 32 : Depreciation – BSE Membership Card – Intangible asset – Bombay Stock Exchange Rules, Rr. 5, 6, 7, 9, 11, 15 and 16A – Bombay Stock Exchange Bye-Laws [S. 2(14)]

The Tribunal held that the Membership Card of the BSE was an intangible asset and the assessee was entitled to depreciation thereon under section 32(1)(ii). The High Court reversed the Tribunal's decision and held that it was only a personal privilege to trade on the floor of the exchange and that such a privilege was not a "licence" or "any other business or commercial right of a similar nature" under section 32(1)(ii). The Supreme Court reversed the decision of the High Court and held on a consideration of the BSE Rules, that the right of membership was a "business or commercial right" and could be said to be owned by the assessee and used for business purposes in terms of section 32(1)(ii). The right of membership, which included the right of nomination, was a "license" or "akin to licence" which was one of the items under section 32(1)(ii). The right to participate in the market had an economic and money value. It was an expense incurred by the assessee, which satisfied the test of being a "licence" or "any other business or commercial right of similar nature". Hence depreciation is allowable. Section 34(1) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 (for short, "1961 Act") has been omitted w.e.f.

1-4-1988. The Supreme Court, remanded the matter back to the High Court after setting aside the impugned order of the High Court on the question referred to the Court, with the direction to the High Court to consider: Whether the assessee has an option in law to claim partial depreciation in respect of block of assets as in the case of Mahendra Mills 243 ITR 56 (SC), the concept of block of assets was not there and section 34(1) of the 1961 Act stood omitted w.e.f. 1-4-1988. The High Court is also asked to consider whether the judgment of the Supreme Court in the case of Mahendra Mills (supra) would apply to the assessment years under consideration also to take into account the scope of Explanation 5 to section 32(1) of the 1961 Act, inserted by the Finance Act, 2001.

On the Tribunal deciding that the assessee was eligible for higher rate of deduction, the High Court in Revenue's appeal had held that it was a question of fact and therefore refused to interfere. The Supreme Court on a petition by Revenue held that a question of law arose and that the High Court would have to decide as to whether the assessee was in the business of running trucks on hire as use of trucks in business of transportation qualifies higher depreciation. ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Business – Profession

The legislature intended to have different scope for "business" and "profession" in various clauses of section 32(1). Therefore, when in erstwhile clause (iv) (now deleted) the legislature has used only "business" then the clause would not apply to "profession". ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Gratuity liability – Plant [S. 43(3)]

The assessee had purchased an undertaking and along with it, taken over the accrued and future liability of gratuity to the employees. The Court held that the gratuity liability taken over formed part of the purchase consideration and was a capital expenditure as it was incurred to acquire an asset of an enduring nature, hence no depreciation would be allowed under section 32 as gratuity liability is neither building, machinery, plant or furniture nor an intangible asset under section 32(1)(ii). The word 'plant' as defined under section 43(3) would also not include gratuity liability. Therefore, gratuity liability taken over by assessee along with acquisition of an industrial undertaking, though a capital expenditure, does not fall under any of the categories of assets specified in section 32, thus no depreciation allowable. ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Poultry shed – Not a ‘plant’

Poultry shed is a building and not a ‘plant’, as such not eligible for higher rate depreciation as applicable to plant and machinery. (A.Ys. 1991-92 & 1992-93).

S. 32 : Depreciation – Intangible asset – Goodwill – Depreciation allowable

The assessee had purchased a hospital with its land, building, equipment, staff, name, trademark and goodwill as a going concern. Under the sale deed the value of the goodwill included the name of the hospital, its logo and trademark was 2 crores. The Assessing Officer disallowed the depreciation on the goodwill on the ground that it was not covered under section 32(1)(ii). The CIT(A) and Tribunal held in favour of the Department. On appeal to the High Court by the assessee, the High Court while allowing the appeal held that though goodwill is not specifically mentioned in section 32(1)(ii) of the Income-Tax Act, depreciation is allowable not only on tangible assets covered by clause (i) of section 32(1), but also on the intangible assets specifically enumerated in clause (ii) and such other business or commercial rights similar to the items specifically covered therein. The High Court held that, by transferring the right to use the name of the hospital itself, the previous owner had transferred the goodwill to the assessee and the benefit derived by the assessee was a retention of continued trust of the patients who were patients of the previous owner. The amount paid for the goodwill for ensuring retention and continued business to the hospital, was one for acquiring business and commercial rights and the same was comparable with trademark, franchise, copyright, etc., the High Court held that goodwill was covered by the provisions of section 32(1)(ii) entitling the assessee for depreciation. ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Sale and lease back – Avoidance – Allowable

The assessee purchased equipment from the Haryana State Electricity Board (“HSEB”) which was already installed at the Board’s Thermal Power Station at Faridabad and immediately leased the equipment back to the HSEB. The assessee claimed 100% depreciation on the said equipment. The Assessing Officer disallowed depreciation on the ground that the transaction was not one of purchase and lease but was a pure financial and loan transaction.

The Hon'ble High Court held dismissing the department appeal that:

- (i) The real intention of the parties in entering into the sale and lease agreement has to be gathered from the words in the agreement in a tangible and in an objective manner and not upon a hypothetical assessment of the supposed motive of the assessee to avoid tax. (Industrial Development Corporation of Orissa Ltd. v. CIT (2004) 268 ITR 130 (Ori.), CIT v. Rajasthan State Electricity Board (2004) 204 CTR 415 (Raj.) and CIT v. Gujarat Gas Company Ltd. (2009) 308 ITR 243 (Guj.) followed);
- (ii) In order to deny the claim of depreciation, it would have to be held that the transaction was not genuine and that the same was a subterfuge. Merely because an assessee gets a commercial advantage because of the factoring in of a tax benefit, it cannot be said that the transaction is not genuine. There is no finding or evidence to indicate that the transaction was not genuine. The observations of Chinappa Reddy, J in McDowell & Co Ltd. v. CTO (1985) 154 ITR 148 is not good law in view of UOI v. Azadi Bachao Andolan (2003) 263 ITR 706 (SC) where it was held that "tax planning may be legitimate provided it is within the framework of law";
- (iii) The observations in Asea Brown Boveri Ltd. v. Industrial Finance Corporation of India (2004) 126 Comp. Cas. 332 (SC) with regard to the nature of a financial lease are not of much use to the revenue in view of the factual backdrop that the transaction has been found to be genuine. Once it is established that the ownership of the equipment is that of the assessee, it is clear that the assessee is entitled to claim depreciation. (A. Y. 1996-97)

During survey, assessee admitted that computer software and hardware were not purchased by it, and it filed a revised return withdrawing the claim of depreciation and offered to tax. Thereafter the assessee filed an affidavit retracting the statement made during the course of survey. The Tribunal recorded the finding of fact that during the course of survey neither the assets were found nor the assessee could establish names of the parties from whom computer software and computer hardware were purchased. High Court confirmed the order of Tribunal. (A. Y. 2001-02).

S. 32 : Depreciation – Goodwill – Assignment

Assessee company acquired cement plant from company C for ` 105.30 crores. Assessing Officer noted that 10 per cent of purchase price represented goodwill and on that basis he disallowed depreciation on ` 10.53 crores. On appeal, Commissioner (Appeals) held that no value could be assigned to good-will and entire sale consideration was to be reduced from value of block of assets on ground that transferor company was established five years ago and through this period it was a loss making unit and thus had no goodwill. The Court held that since cement plant purchased was a loss making unit from its commencement of business and no value was assigned in respect of brand name as well as goodwill. Assessing Officer was not justified in deducting 10 per cent towards estimated value of goodwill from total purchase consideration and disallowing proportionate depreciation. (A.Y. 1991-92).

S. 32 : Depreciation – Undivided – Shipping – Barge

The assessee, engaged in shipping business, owned a barge which was included in the block of assets. The barge met with an accident and sank on 6.3.2000 (A.Y. 2000-01). As efforts to retrieve the barge were uneconomical, the barge was sold on as-is-where-is in May 2001 (A.Y. 2002-03). As the barge was non-operational and not used for business at all in A.Y. 2001-02, the Assessing Officer denied depreciation.

The Tribunal held that individual assets had lost their identity and only the "block of assets" had to be considered. It was held that the test of "user" had to be applied upon the block of assets as a whole and not on individual assets.

High Court dismissed the revenue's appeal.

S. 32 : Depreciation – Higher rate – Commercial vehicles on hire purchase basis

The assessee-company, which carried on the business of leasing out commercial vehicles on hire purchase basis, claimed depreciation at 40 per cent on all the leased out commercial vehicles. The Assessing Officer disallowed the claim and restricted the depreciation to 24 per cent on the ground that the assessee-company itself had not utilized the commercial vehicles on hire.

It was held, that the assessee was entitled to the higher rate of depreciation.

The Supreme Court has granted special leave to the Department to appeal against this judgment : see [2008] 299 ITR (St.) 92-Ed.] (A.Y. 2000-01)

S. 32 : Depreciation – Unabsorbed depreciation – Set off against capital gains

Assessee company claimed set-off of capital gains against brought forward unabsorbed depreciation on ground that as per amended provisions of section 32(2) with effect from 1-4-1997, cumulated unabsorbed depreciation brought forward as on 1-4-1997 could be set off against income under any other head for assessment year 1997-98 and seven subsequent years. Assessing Officer rejected assessee's claim and brought capital gains to tax. In view of amendment to section 32 with effect from 1-4-1997, Tribunal held that assessee was entitled to set off of unabsorbed depreciation brought forward as on 1-4-1997 against capital gains of relevant assessment year. Tribunal also remitted case to the Assessing Officer to calculate the amount of depreciation available till 1-4-1997 that would be included in assessee's income, to give effect to Tribunal's finding. ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Meaning of 'put to use' – 'to exploit'

Sec. 32(1) of the I.T. Act 1961, uses the expression "put to use". If the expression "put to use" is given the meaning as defined in the dictionary, then the block of assets acquired by the assessee during the previous year is applied or employed for the purpose of business of the assessee in that previous year for 180 days would make the assessee eligible for full depreciation. Thus "put to use" does not mean "to exploit." (A.Y. 1993-94)

S. 32 : Depreciation – Depreciation not allowable [S. 37(4)]

Section 32 is not to be regarded as a code with regard to depreciation, which is unaffected by what is provided in other provisions with regard to depreciation. The absence of reference to section 32 in section 37(4) is not of any materiality as the legislative intent to deal with depreciation is clear to the extent that section denies depreciation on the depreciable assets specified therein. The legislative prohibition must be given full effect and not defeated in its entirety by allowing what is prohibited under section 37(4) under section 32. (A.Y. 1989-90)

S. 32 : Depreciation – Amalgamation – Second proviso – Quantification

The assets have been acquired and used from 29th August, 2003. In this case therefore proportion adopted by the assessee as fifty-fifty seems to be correct, however this apportionment has to be done out of total depreciation which was allowable at 100 per cent in view of second proviso i.e. Amalgamating company has rightly claimed the depreciation for the first six months because only depreciation of six months has been claimed in the case of amalgamated company. The Tribunal set aside the order of Commissioner (Appeals) and directed the Assessing Officer to allow the depreciation for six months. (A.Y. 2004-05).

S. 32 : Depreciation – Additional depreciation – Enhancement of installed capacity – Qua Business or Qua an Undertaking

Assessing Officer held that enhancement of installed capacity had to be considered in respect of whole business and not with reference to one single unit and disallowed additional depreciation. Tribunal held that one should consider increase in capacity of an undertaking in which additional machinery was installed. Since concerned unit was an independent unit which had increased its capacity by more than 10 percent, said undertaking satisfied conditions prescribed in section 32, hence additional depreciation was to be allowed thereon. ### S. 32 : Depreciation – Intellectual property right (IPR) – Goodwill

Where the assessee company had taken over the business of the firm with IPR at the value determined by the valuers and such value was made part of the agreement as the cost of consideration which passed on from the company to the firm and the cost so determined was the real amount then it is wrong to presume that there was a notional amount which was transacted between the parties; assessee was entitled to claim depreciation on the value of such Intellectual property right. (A.Ys. 2001-02, 2002-03, 2003-04)

Rajan H. Shinde v. Dy. CIT (2006) 103 ITD 360 / 104 TTJ 445 (TM)(Pune)(Trib.)

S. 32 : Depreciation – Timing difference – Ownership

- (i) Proviso to section 32 provides that if the asset acquired by the assessee was used for a period less than 180 days during the relevant previous year, half of the normal rate of depreciation would be granted. It is on the basis of the above statutory provision that the assessee-company claimed depreciation at half of the normal rate on the two ships acquired by it on 29-3-1996. One important factor to be borne in mind while deciding the admissibility of depreciation allowance on one side and the other expenses on the other is that in allowing depreciation, whether it is allowed in a particular assessment year or in the year succeeding that particular assessment year, is only that of a 'timing difference'. In the case of other expenses, the question is either allowed or disallowed, once for all. If an expenditure pertaining to a particular assessment year is not allowed in that particular assessment year, then ordinarily, it will not be allowed in any other assessment year. Therefore, the crucial difference of timing needs to be considered while deciding the issue of depreciation.
- (ii) For allowing depreciation de facto ownership is the crucial factor to be looked into and not the technicality of de jure ownership.
- (iii) Nexus between the assets used and the income earned need not be satisfied in the very same previous year of deployment of the assets. (A.Y. 1996-97)

S. 32 : Depreciation – Actual cost – Foreign exchange fluctuation [S. 43(1), 43A]

Additional liability due to fluctuation in foreign exchange rate arises when the assessee purchased assets at a price and therefore, it cannot be said that the liability did not exist or accrue till the installment become due or payable merely because the said liability was to be discharged in installments. However, the liability being the present one it was required to be added to the cost of plant and machinery acquired out of such foreign exchange loan in view of s. 43A. And, therefore, the actual cost defined in s. 43 (1) was to be increased by the additional liability due to fluctuation in the foreign exchange rate and the depreciation was allowable thereon. S. 32A : Investment allowance – Foreign exchange fluctuation [S. 41(1)(a), 43A(1)]

In the relevant year, the assessee had claimed a deduction of Investment Allowance for the machineries purchased in the earlier year on account of foreign exchange fluctuation. The Supreme Court held that section 43A(1) was clearly applicable for grant of the Investment Allowance. Any extra benefit taken was directed to be taxed in the year when the liability was reduced as provided in section 41(1)(a) and the Commissioner of Income Tax (A) was directed to examine this aspect of extra benefit. ### S. 32A : Investment allowance – X-ray machines – Ultrasound scanner – Hospital

The assessee is a public limited company engaged in the business of running hospitals. The assessee had claimed investment allowance in respect of the equipments such as x-ray machines, ultrasound scanners, angiography, gamma camera, etc. The Assessing Officer was of the view that hospital is not engaged in manufactured production of any article or thing which is a prerequisite for grant of investment allowances, and therefore disallowed the investment allowance claim by the assessee. The CIT(A) and Tribunal held in favour of the assessee. On appeal to the High Court by the Department, the High Court while dismissing the appeal held that medical instruments provide a basic knowledge to diagnose and treat diseases and enable doctors to study how diseases progress in human bodies and compare how biological processes work in a healthy body. The High Court further held that speed and technology are improving human life and the progress of scientific and technical knowledge cannot be ignored and therefore held that medical equipment used by hospitals are entitled to investment allowance under section 32A of the Income-tax Act 1961. ### Section 33AC : Reserves for shipping business

S. 33AC : Reserves for shipping business – Operation of ships – Object of shipping

It was clear from sec. 33AC(1) as applicable to the A.Y. 1994-95 that the only requirement prescribed was that the assessee must be a Govt. company or a company formed and registered in India with the main object of carrying on the business of operation of ships. There was no such requirement that the assessee in order to be eligible for deduction had to actually operate ships or that the amount in respect of which deduction was to be allowed and credited to the reserve account had to be the income earned from shipping business. It was further held that Amendment to section 33AC with effect from April 1, 1996 was not clarificatory or retrospective. Thus, ITAT decision vide GAL offshore Services Ltd. v. ACIT (2005) 92 ITD 525 / 92 TTJ 719 (Mum.)(Trib.) is reversed. (A.Y. 1994-95)

S. 33AC : Reserves for shipping business – Tugs are ships – IT Rules

In absence of the definition of “Ship” in the Act, the meaning assigned to the term “ship” under rules of the IT Rules should be considered. The assessee-enterprise being a public company under the Companies Act was entitled to deduction under section 33AC. (A.Ys. 2000-01 & 2001-02)

S. 33AC : Reserves for shipping business – Creation of reserve – Book entries

Following the ratio of Supreme Court in Shri Shubhalaxmi Mills Ltd. v. Addl CIT (1989) 177 ITR 193, the Tribunal held that mere book entries suffice for creating reserve fund. As assessee had created reserve to the extent of total income available before making any deduction under Chapter VI-A, conditions precedent for claiming the benefit were satisfied. (A.Y. 1994-95)

S. 33AC : Reserves for shipping business – Profit derived – Conditional

Mere claim of benefit under section 33AC does not allow an assessee without production of material evidence in support of it. An assessee is not entitled for the deduction as requisite conditions prescribed under section 33AC were not fulfilled.

On the facts of the case the Tribunal held that the assessee was not entitled for the benefit under section 33AC as –

- (i) the CIT(A) found that the appellant’s main object was not carrying on operation of ships but road transport.
- (ii) the records also showed that the assessee was deriving maximum revenue from business of road transport.
- (iii) the memorandum of association of the assessee contained many objects but as per the requirement of the provisions of sec. 33AC there is no mention about the main object of the assessee in it even though the assessee-company was registered prior to 1965 as per s. 13(1)(c) of the Companies Act.
- (iv) the assessee has not created the reserve as required under section 33AC and has not shown any evidence for its utilisation within the prescribed period under law. (A.Y. 1993-94)

S. 35 : Expenditure on scientific research for parent company – No deduction

Assessee carrying on/doing no business for itself but only carrying out research and development work for its parent company, results of which were to be used by parent company for extension of parent company's business. It was held that there should be a business carried on by the assessee and the scientific research should relate to that business which is carried on by the assessee. Scientific Research, per se, is not contemplated as a 'business' by the provisions of section 35(1)(iv) r.w.s. 43(3)(iii)(a). Assessee's activity was facilitating the extension of business of its parent company in USA and not that of its own and hence, CIT(A) was justified in holding that assessee was not entitled to deduction under section 35(1)(iv). ### Section 35AB : Expenditure on know-how.

S. 35AB : Expenditure on know-how – Purchase of designs and drawings – Consultancy charges [S. 37(1)]

Assessee has paid ` 11,39,195 for purchase of designs and drawings. Out of which 10,39,195 was paid for getting designs and drawings for manufacturing of opening roller, while remaining amount of ` 1,00,000 was paid as a consultancy charges. Assessee claimed entire deduction under section 37(1). Assessing Officer has allowed only 1/6th of expenditure under section 35AB. On appeal, Commissioner (Appeals) held that entire expenditure was allowable under section 37(1). Tribunal upheld the order of Commissioner (Appeals). On further appeal to High Court, the High Court held that the amount spent for acquiring technical knowhow for increasing its product range therefore it attract the provision of section 35AB, hence only 1/6th of the said amount would be deductible in relevant assessment year. In respect of consultancy charges provisions of section 35AB cannot be applied, the said amount will be allowable under section 37(1) of the Income-tax Act. (A. Y. 1990-91).

S. 35AB : Expenditure on know-how – Know-how fees – Revenue expenditure

The assessee had paid technical knowhow fees in pursuance to the agreement with NIIT Ltd. for technical assistance. The assessee treated the said expenditure as revenue expenditure. The Assessing Officer however, treated the fees as capital expenditure under section 35AB and allowed only one-sixth (1/6) of the expenditure. On appeal the High Court observed that, the assessee did not indulge in the activities of manufacturing and processing goods referred to in Explanation to section 35AB of the Act. Accordingly, it held that the expenditure incurred by the assessee was to be treated as revenue expenditure. (A.Y. 1996-97)

S. 35AB : Expenditure on know-how – Capital or revenue

To attract applicability of section 35A, whether capital or revenue is not decisive. What is material is whether or not payment made satisfies the requirement of section 35AB. Use of expression “acquiring” in S. 35AB has to be construed liberally for the purpose for the purpose of S. 35AB. It is not necessary that the assessee should become the absolute owner of the know-how. (A.Y. 1988-89)

S. 35AB : Expenditure on know-how – Know-how – Foreign exchange fluctuation – Year of allowability – Accrual

Deduction under section 35AB in respect of increased liability on account of foreign exchange fluctuation would be allowable only in year when amount is actually paid to non-resident party outside India, subject to tax at source being deducted and paid to Government account. Liability on account of fluctuation in foreign exchange rate cannot be allowed on accrual basis and mere credit every year into account of non resident will not entitle assessee to claim deduction. ### S. 35AB : Expenditure on know-how – Revenue expenditure

Where assessee had paid a sum as technical know-how fee to Japanese company and assessee was merely entitled to use the know how manufacture of motor cycle and its parts without acquiring any right of ownership of know-how, provisions of section 35AB would not apply. Treatment of expenditure incurred for acquiring know-how is different from the expenditure incurred for obtaining the mere use of the know-how. Former is the capital expenditure whereas latter is Revenue Expenditure. (A.Y. 1996-97)

Section 35AC : Expenditure on eligible projects or scheme

S. 35AC : Expenditure on eligible projects or Schemes – Contribution to basketball trust

Under section 35AB, there is no necessity of carrying on any business by assessee and deduction can be allowed against any income earned by assessee and included in total income of assessee. Where basketball trust to which assessee had made donation in respect of which it claimed exemption under section 35AC, was enjoying approval by National Committee and thus, expenditure by way of payment was incurred in respect of eligible projects and schemes notified under section 35AC, assessee's claim for deduction could not be disallowed on the ground that basketball complex was being used by OTG Group for its business interests instead of preparing young basketball players for national and international levels. Section 35CCA : Expenditure by way of payment to associations and institutions for carrying out rural development programmes.

S. 35CCA : Rural development programmes – Payments to associations – Withdrawal of exemption

The assessee had made donation to the Society for rural development. The institution had as its object of the undertaking to carry out approved programmes of rural development. The society had issued a certificate to the assessee which had also been approved by the prescribed authority. The Assessing Officer refused deduction on the ground that the certificate granted to the society was withdrawn retrospectively. The Court held that once it was found that the assessee had fulfilled all the conditions which had been laid down under section 35CCA of the Act for claiming deduction of the amount donated by it, there was no further obligation on the part of the assessee to see that the amount was utilized for the purpose for which it was donated. Further, the deduction was allowed on the certificate furnished and it was not for the assessee to show whether the institution to which the money had been donated was carrying on rural development work as envisaged under section 35CCA of the Act. Accordingly the order of High Court was affirmed.

Section 35DDA : Amortisation of expenditure incurred under voluntary retirement scheme.

S. 35DDA : Amortisation of expenditure – Voluntary retirement scheme – Amalgamation or demerger [S. 10(10C), 37(1)]

Section 35DDA would be attracted only when payment has been made to an employee in connection with his voluntary retirement, in accordance with the scheme or schemes of voluntary retirement. Since the payment reduces the burden on the assessee relatable to subsequent years, the legislature inserted this section in order to allow only 1/5th of total sum paid by the assessee to its employees. This amount in the hands of the employee has been exempted under section 10(10C) to the extent of ₹ 5 lakhs. Provisions of section 35DDA were not attracted in the matter of VRS compensation paid to the retiring employees as the conditions of Rule 2BA were not met and the said expenditure is allowable under section 37(1). S. 36(1)(ii) : Deductions – Bonus or commission – Section bars tax avoidance scheme of paying commission instead of dividend

- (i) The argument that Section 36(1)(ii) is applicable only to employees who are not shareholders is not acceptable because payment of dividend to shareholders is not compulsory. Section 36(1)(ii) applies to all employees including shareholder employees though the disallowability is restricted to partners and shareholders because it is only in those cases that payment can be said to be in lieu of profit or dividend;
- (ii) The argument that as no dividend was “payable”, section 36(1)(ii) does not apply is not acceptable because the word “payable” does not mean that dividend should be statutorily or legally payable. Since payment of dividend is discretionary and not compulsory, any such construction will lead to absurd results. The word “payable” means that dividend would have been declared by any reasonable management on the facts and circumstances of the case considering the profitability and other relevant factors and become payable to shareholders. If a reasonable conclusion can be drawn that the dividend ought to have been paid and that instead of paying dividend, commission was paid, section 36(1)(ii) would be attracted;
- (iii) On facts, there is no evidence to show that the directors had rendered any extra services for payment of huge commission in addition to services rendered as an employee for which salary was paid. Further, though the turnover and the profit was exceptionally high as compared to the earlier years, this was because of the stock market boom. The assessee being a share broker gets commission on sale/purchase of shares by investors/traders and its income is assured irrespective of whether the investor/ trader loses or gains in the transaction. The steady rise in performance was due to improved market conditions and not because of any extra service rendered by the directors. Also, no dividend was declared even though any reasonable management would have declared at least about 20% dividend in the years when there were substantial profits;
- (iv) The device adopted by the assessee was obviously with the intention to avoid payment of full taxes. There is obvious tax avoidance. Section 36(1)(ii) is intended to prevent escape from taxation by describing the payment as bonus or commission when in fact it should have reached the shareholders as profit or dividend (Loyal Motor 14 ITR 647 (Bom) referred) (A.Y. 2006-07)

S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Borrowed from partner

[S. 40(b)(iv)]

In order that interest paid on borrowings can be allowed as a deduction in computing the business profits, every assessee, including a firm has to establish, in the first instance, that it was allowable under section 36(1)(iii), and in the case of a firm, further that the amount does not exceed the limit prescribed under section 40(b)(iv). On the facts since the assessee had borrowed the moneys from its partners as early as 1991 and the Appellate Tribunal had held that the loans were given by the partners for business purpose and the interest did not exceed 18% per annum simple interest, the assessee firm was entitled to deduction of interest on the borrowings for the A.Ys. 1993-94 to 1997-98. The Court further held that since opening balance of the profits of the assessee-firm as on April 1st, 1994 was ` 1.91 crores, and the profits were sufficient to cover the loan given to a sister concern of ` 5 lakhs only, the appellate Tribunal ought to have held that the loan given was from the assessee's own funds. The High Court dismissed the Department's appeal on the ground that no substantial question of law arose. On appeal by the Department to the Supreme Court, the Court observed that the High Court had lost sight of facts which if proved and established would indicate a circular trading entered into solely with the idea of evading tax. S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Interest free advances – Owned funds

Tribunal had recorded a finding that there was sufficient fund available with assessee-company in form of share capital, share application money, reserve and surplus, other than borrowed money, for diverting a sum to sister concern, it could not be said that amount of loan advanced to sister concern was out of borrowed fund. S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Interest free advances

Tribunal considered in entirety all circumstances on record and noticed that the assessee, which itself had taken loans from market in same financial year, had given loan to the extent of ₹ 34 lakhs to its sister concern free of interest, no question of law arose from its order disallowing assessee's claim for deduction of interest on borrowed capital. (A.Y. 1996-97)

S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Interest forgone – Subsidiary – Commercial expediency

Tribunal found that assessee had forgone interest on debit balance of the subsidiary on account of latter's weak financial position and commercial expediency, it was justified in deleting proportionate disallowance of interest paid by assessee. (A.Y. 1980-81)

Assessing authority disallowed proportionate amount of interest payment claimed by assessee as deduction on ground that no interest was charged by assessee on advance given to its subsidiaries, Tribunal was justified in deleting the disallowance. (A.Y. 1980-81)

S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Realisation of dues

The language of section 36(1)(iii), is very clear in that an assessee would be entitled to deduction of interest paid on capital borrowings for the purpose of business. Section does not contemplate a situation where an assessee is required to take positive steps for realizing its outstanding due in order to be eligible for claim of deduction. ### S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – Proviso – Not put to use

The proviso which has been inserted to clause (iii) of section 36, has been made effective from 1-4-2004. This proviso is not applicable to the assessment year 1991-92. Thus for the assessment year 1991-92, interest paid on borrowed capital taken for the purposes of expansion was allowable irrespective of whether or not the asset was put to use. (A.Y. 1991-92)

S. 36(1)(iii) : Deductions – Interest on borrowed capital – For the purpose of business

While adjudicating the claim for deduction under section 36(1)(iii), the nature of the expenses, whether the expenses are on capital account or revenue account is irrelevant. On the facts the assessee undertook two fold activities. It brought and sold flats. Secondly the assessee was also engaged in construction business. As the loan was taken for obtaining stock-in-trade the assessee was entitled to deduction under section 36(1)(iii). (A.Y. 1987-88)

S. 36(1)(va) : Deductions – Employees' contribution to certain funds [S. 43B]

The employees contribution received by the employer would be income in his hands and would be allowed as permissible deduction under clause (va) of section 36 (1), in computing the business income under section 28 provided the assessee credits the same to the relevant fund. Section 43B read with proviso thereto provides that there should be actual payment and further the actual payment payments are to be made with in the due date as prescribed under the Act. If the payments are not made with in the due date, there is contravention of the provisions of the Provident Fund Act under the income tax Act and the defaulting assesseees are not entitled to the benefits of deduction, which are otherwise allowable to them under the scheme of the provisions of the Act. That is to ensure that the beneficial legislations are complied with strictly. Thus the tribunal was not right in holding that section 36(1)(va) yields to section 43B when second proviso to section 43B is to be reckoned as defined in Explanation to section 36 (1) (va). Employer has to remit contribution to provident fund within 15 days from close of month for which employees earned their salary and 'close of 15th day' is not to be calculated from end of month in which wages are paid. ### S. 36(1)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Provision for NPA – RBI directions

Provision for NPA made under NBFCs Prudential Norms (Reserve Bank) Directions, 1998 is not an "expense".

Provision for NPA made under NBFCs Prudential Norms (Reserve Bank) Directions, 1998 has to be added back in computing profits and gains and is not an "expense". Said provision is not deductible under section 36(1)(vii) and is expressly disallowed by section 36(1)(vii) Expln. (inserted by Act 14 of 2001 w.e.f. 1-4-1989). Having been so disallowed it cannot be allowed under section 37 either.

Scope and applicability of section 37 – It applies only to item not falling under sections 30 to 36. Hence, an item not falling under sections 30 to 36 but excluded by section 36(1)(vii) Expln. Cannot be covered by section 37. Therefore, the provision for doubtful debt made by NBFC having been kept outside the scope of “written off” by the said Expln. then the deduction cannot be claimed under section 37.

Exclusion of NBFCs from the benefit of deductions available to banking companies does not violate Articles 14 and 19 as it satisfies the test of “intelligible differentia” and the principle of “reasonable restriction”, respectively.

Court’s acceptance of NBFCs’ plea to include NBFCs in section 36(1)(vii-a) would amount to judicial legislation, which is impermissible. (A.Y. 1998-99)

S. 36(1)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Write off in books

The Assessing Officer disallowed the claim of bad debt which was written off by the assessee. But the learned CIT(A) deleted the said disallowance. Further, the Hon'ble ITAT confirmed the said deletion.

On appeal by the Department in High Court, the Court held that the provisions of section 36(1)(vii) of the Income-tax Act, 1961 were to be read with the Board Circular No. 551 dt. 23-1-1990 and if the assessee had written off the debt as a bad debt, that would satisfy the purpose of the section. The High Court dismissed the appeal.

S. 36(1)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Sale consideration received partly [S. 36(2)]

Profit on sale of shares of various companies have been shown under the head "other income". When assessee received part of sale consideration, balance wrote off as irrecoverable bad debt, the condition of section 36(1), read with 36(2) was satisfied. Hence amount written off allowable as bad debts. (A.Y. 2001-02)

S. 36(1)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Prudent judgment

Once it was accepted by the department that the transactions actually took place, then the decision to write-off the loan as bad debt was a consequence of an honest judgment. Any prudent man on learning that an unsecured loan had become perilously irrecoverable would immediately initiate each and every legal remedy available to him as had been manifested itself in the case of the assessee. Therefore, the Tribunal was right in deleting the disallowance of the balance sum. (A.Y. 2003-04) *CIT v. Morgan Securities & Credits P. Ltd. ### S. 36(i)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Export incentive

The assessee had claimed bad debt on account of export incentive which had become irrecoverable. On appeal the High Court held that the assessee had taken the amount of export incentive as part of its income in earlier year and this amount was written off by the assessee only when it become irrecoverable. In such case as the essential condition of section 36(1) (vii) were fulfilled the assessee was eligible for deduction of the amount as bad debt.

S. 36(1)(vii) : Deductions – Bad debt – Business loss – If not 'Bad Debt', – Claim sans specific ground invalid [S. 28(i), Income Tax (Appellate Tribunal) Rules, 1963 – Rule 27]

Before the Tribunal, the assessee raised a ground only on "bad debt" (and not "business loss"). At the hearing, it conceded the claim for "bad debt" and pressed for the claim for "business loss". The Tribunal held that the claim regarding "business loss" cannot be entertained because, though the CIT(A) has dealt with the issue, there is no specific ground. The claim is also not maintainable under Rule 27 since that applies only to a Respondent in the appeal. (A. Y. 2003-04).

As per the plain reading of the provisions of section 36(1)(viiia)(c), no condition of any specific system of accounting to be followed by the assessee had been provided. Therefore, the deduction being a statutory deduction, had to be allowed on the basis of the provisions made in the books of account, notwithstanding the fact that the assessee was following the cash system of accounting. It further noted that in the assessee's case, the debts also included the amount of loans/advances, which were not affected by the method of accounting being followed by the assessee. (A.Y. 2002-03)

S. 36(2)(i) : Deductions – Bad debt – Written off – Amended law

Amendment to section 36(1)(vii) of the Income-tax Act, 1961. Whether obligatory for the assessee to prove that debt has become bad as long as writing off was bona fide. The High Court held that for the treatment of a debt as a bad debt had to be a commercial or business decision of the assessee depending on the relevant material in possession of the assessee. After the amendment, it was neither obligatory nor the onus on the assessee to prove that the debt written off by it was in reality a bad debt as long as it was bona fide and based on commercial wisdom or expediency.

S. 36(2)(i) : Deductions – Bad debt – Share broker – Amount of debt

In the present case following the Special Bench decision in the case of Shreyas Morakhia (40 SOT 432), it was held that in order to satisfy the conditions stipulated in section 36(2)(i), it is not necessary that the entire amount of debt has to be taken into account in computing the income of the assessee and it will be sufficient even if part of such debt is taken into account in computing the income of the assessee. This principle applies to a share broker. The amount receivable on account of brokerage is a part of debt receivable by the share broker from his client against purchase of shares and once such brokerage is credited to the profit and loss account and taken into account in computing his income, the condition stipulated in section 36(2)(i) of the Act gets satisfied. The bad debt therefore, claimed by the broker was allowed. (A.Y. 2003-04).

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Capital or revenue – Construction of drainage [S. 260A]

The assessee which ran a paper mill at Ahmedgarh, applied to the Pollution Control Board and the Forest Department to allow it to discharge its effluent matter from its mill to the village Tallewal drain. The Forest department granted permission with certain conditions. The question was whether expenses incurred on the construction of open drain of about 14 kilometres for disposal of its effluents would be revenue expenditure. According to the Department it was a capital expenditure. The CIT(A) and Tribunal held that it was revenue expenditure. The High Court in Appeal reversed the concurrent finding of the CIT(A) and the Tribunal. On appeal to the Supreme Court, the Supreme Court set aside the order of High Court for fresh consideration. The Supreme Court observed that framing of a proper substantial question of law was mandatory requirement under section 260A, and without framing or reframing of such a question High Court Could not have reversed the concurrent finding given by the CIT(A) and Tribunal. Assessee established phosphoric acid project as an extension to its present business activities and for that purpose obtained foreign currency loan from IDBI which in turn was refinanced by COFACE subject to the assessee paying finance charges to COFACE which according to the assessee was similar to payment of interest. The Department disallowed the said item on the ground that finance charges paid to COFACE on foreign currency loan was in the nature of interest and commitment charges and since the charges have been paid in relation to the project of manufacturing phosphoric acid which did not commence production during the assessment year under consideration, the expenses incurred were capital in nature. Apex Court held the expenses were allowable as business expenditure.

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Capital or revenue – Bonus share

The expenditure incurred on account of stamp duty and registration fees for issue of bonus shares is allowable expenditure as the issue of bonus shares is merely reallocation of company's fund and does not result in expansion of the capital base, it can not be held that company acquires a benefit or an advantage of an enduring nature. ### S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Issuance of bonus shares

Issuance of bonus shares does not result in any inflow of fresh funds or increase in the capital employed; the capital employed remains the same. Issuance of bonus shares by capitalization of reserves is merely a reallocation of company's fund. If that be so, then it cannot be held that the company has acquired a benefit or advantage of enduring nature. The total funds available with the company will remain the same and the issue of bonus shares will not result in any change in the capital structure of the company. Issue of bonus shares does not result in the expansion of capital base of the company. Thus, the expenditure incurred in connection with issuance of bonus shares is revenue expenditure. ### S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Replacement expenditure – Current repairs

Where on appeal to High Court two questions were framed and High Court, while answering the question that expenditure on replacement of electric control panels was not in nature of current repairs, remanded matter to Tribunal to decide question as to whether it was capital in nature, in view of paucity of material, remand was proper and High Court's remand order was to be upheld; there was no merit in revenue's plea that the High Court having taken the view that expenditure was not one within the contemplation of section 31(1) ought to have as a consequence, answered second question in favour of the revenue holding expenditure to be a capital expenditure. S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Capital or revenue – ‘Application Software’ – Revenue in nature

The expenditure incurred for the purpose of installation of “Oracle” software for financial accounting, inventory and purchase was held to be revenue in nature as it did not result in creation of new asset or a new source of income. The test of enduring benefit is not a certain or a conclusive test. What is required to be seen is the real intent and purpose of the expenditure and whether the expenditure results in creation of fixed capital for the assessee. Expenditure incurred which enables the profit making structure to work more efficiently leaving the source of the profit making structure untouched is expense in the nature of revenue expenditure. Test of enduring benefit or advantage breaks down especially in cases which deal with technology and software application which do not in any manner supplant the source of income or added to the fixed capital of the assessee. ### S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Capital or revenue – Development of website

The Assessee engaged in travel business, incurred certain expenditure towards development of website for the purposes of its business. The Hon'ble High Court held that merely because a particular expenditure may result in an enduring benefit would not make such an expenditure of capital nature as what is to be seen is real intent and purpose of expenditure and as to whether there is accretion of fixed capital of Assessee. As expenditure on website would not change the fixed capital of an Assessee, even though website might provide enduring benefit to Assessee, expenditure incurred has to be regarded as revenue expenditure. ### S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Software, Replacement of UPS System and Printer – Allowable

The court held that the concept of enduring benefit must respond to the changing economic realities of the business. The expenses incurred by installation of software packages in the present computer world, which improves the modern communication technology, enables the assessee to carry on business operation effectively, efficiently, smoothly and profitably. However, such software itself does not work on a stand alone basis. It has to be fitted to a computer system to work. Such software enhance efficiency of the operation. It is an aid in the manufacturing process rather than tool itself. Therefore the payment for such application of software, though there is an enduring benefit, does not result in acquisition of any capital asset hence has to be treated as revenue expenditure.

The court also held that expenditure incurred on replacement of printer was also revenue expenditure. (A.Ys. 1995-96, 1997-98)

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Compensation on shipment – Contingent liability

That the assessee under the earlier contract was liable to make payment of a certain amount on compensation. However, that liability stood modified by a subsequent contract between the parties, which provided that the compensation under the earlier contract would be paid and payable by reimbursement by the assessee to the foreign company only if orders were placed by that foreign company with the assessee. Further, clause 2 of the second contract contemplated reimbursement by the assessee to the foreign company at 50 cents per ounce. Thus, the liability to pay compensation was contingent upon shipping per ounce. If for any reason in future the shipping was stopped, abandoned or could not take place, the liability to pay compensation to the extent of the goods not shipped would not arise. Thus, the liability which the assessee was claiming was not a fixed liability, but was a contingent liability and, therefore, the deduction sought by the assessee was not permissible under section 37 of the Act.

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Business loss [S. 28]

The assessee was a sole selling agent of a principal for sale of liquor. Assessee was also engaged in the business as a recovery agent. The principal modified the terms of agreement to the effect that the assessee, henceforth, will also be responsible for recovery of outstanding dues from liquor sold through his agency. Thereafter the principal debited the assessee's account with an amount outstanding against one of the persons to whom liquor was sold by the assessee. The assessee claimed the amount so deducted by the principal as bad debts under section 36(2) of the Act. Assessing Officer negated the claim of the assessee. The High Court on this set of facts held that as there was a valid agreement between the parties and the assessee had agreed to share responsibility of bad debts on account of non recovery as one of the obligations in lieu of the commission earned by him. The bad debts so incurred on account of non recovery of such dues from buyer of liquor from the assessee cannot be said to be not related to the business of the assessee and the same should be allowable as bad debts/ business loss.

Where prior to formation of partnership, the parties mutually agreed to take up a works contract and thereafter, the partnership was formed to execute the same. The payments for work done before the formation of partnership, were made after the firm came into existence. On these set of facts the High Court held that the sales have to be equated with receipts for the work done and it was an admitted fact that receipts against the work done prior to formation of firm was received after formation of the firm. Accordingly, till the receipt, the expenses incurred could not be claimed and therefore, the same had to be carried forward and allowed in the year in which the receipts are received.

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Foreign income – Foreign Taxes – DTAA – Credit for State taxes u/s. 91 in addition to Federal Taxes – India-USA [S. 40a(ii)]

The claim of the assessee that it is entitled to tax credit under sections 90 & 91 in respect of the foreign taxes as well as a deduction under section 37(1) is not justified and results in a double unintended benefit.

The argument that if deduction under section 37(1) is not granted, credit for foreign taxes should be granted under section 90 even in respect of income eligible for deduction under section 80HHE is not acceptable because this would be contrary to the language of the DTAA and result in an assessee getting refund of US taxes if he had no tax liability in India.

The argument that sections 90 & 91 are confined to USA Federal taxes and not to USA State taxes and that therefore the bar in section 40(a)(ii) does not apply to USA State taxes is not acceptable because any payment of Income-tax is an application of income as held in Inder Singh Gill 47 ITR 284. Further, the scheme of sections 90 & 91 does not discriminate between Federal taxes and State taxes and though the India-USA DTAA confines the credit only to Federal taxes, the assessee will be entitled to relief under section 91 in respect of both taxes as that will be more beneficial to the assessee vis-à-vis tax credit under DTAA. Consequently, the bar against deduction in section 40(a)(ii) will apply to USA State taxes as well though the assessee will be entitled to credit in respect of USA State taxes. (A.Y. 2000-01)

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Lease hold rights – Expenses for acquisition of

The assessee had obtained certain land on 99 year lease after payment of certain amount. The assessee claimed deduction of said amount as revenue expenses considering the same as advance rent. The Assessing Officer rejected the claim of the assessee. On appeal, the Commissioner (Appeals) held that the amount represented advance rent was allowable as deduction. As the entire consideration was required to be paid even before entering in to agreement which itself showed that the payment of the consideration was condition precedent for acquiring the lease hold rights. The lease agreement itself showed that entire premium was paid by the assessee before entering in the agreement. Considering the facts the tribunal held that consideration was nothing but a price for obtaining the lease hold rights by the assessee, therefore the said amount being capital in nature, the same is not allowable as deduction. S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Loose papers – Allowability of expenses vis-a-vis addition as unexplained expenditure [S. 69C]

Loose papers found during the course of search clearly showed large payment in cash outside books as interest on excess advance and discount against expected order for machines to be placed on assessee and papers clearly state that assessee had incurred unaccounted expenditure for the purpose of business. On the facts it was held that even if such amount was added as deemed income under section 69C, it was allowable as a business expenditure under section 37(1). This finding was based upon the prevailing provision of sec. 69C. In the relevant period proviso debarring to claim such addition on account of unexplained expenditure under section 69C as deduction was inserted by the Finance (No.2) Act, 1998, wef 1/4/1999 and therefore, it was not retrospective. In this regard the Circular No. 772, dated 23rd Dec., 1998, clarifies that amendment would take effect from 1st April, 1999, and would accordingly apply in relation to A.Y. 1999-2000 and subsequent years.

S. 37(1) : Business expenditure – Liquidated damages on late supply of capital assets is in nature of capital receipt – Refund thereof not allowable as business expenses [S. 56, 57(iii)]

Applicant recovered liquidated damages for late receipt of plant & machinery as per terms of purchase agreement; it adjusted such amounts against cost of assets in some years but in some years it was shown as income and tax paid thereon; subsequently it refunded certain amounts recovered earlier as liquidated damages – Issue is whether the amount refunded on account of waiver of liquidated damages is an allowable deduction from its business income – AAR observed that main issue to be resolved is whether nature of the LD is capital or revenue. Damages recovered on account of late supply of capital assets have been held to be capital in nature and not allowable as revenue expenditure by Hon'ble Supreme Court in Swadeshi Cotton Mills Co. Ltd. v. CIT (No. 2)(1967) 63 ITR 65. Following this principle, Authority held that damages recovered by the applicant were in the nature of capital receipt and did not come within the purview of sub-clause (iv) of section 28 of the Act, which deals with profits and gains of business or profession - Hence ruled that refund of such LD subsequently is not allowable as deduction from business income. ITO found that the assessee was entitled to deduction under section 35B for entertainment expenditure, however the ITO invoked the provision of section 37 (2A) to limit the expenditure. Assessee went in appeal only in respect of limiting the entertainment expenses. CIT (A) and Tribunal allowed the claim of assessee. Before the High Court it was urged by the Department that entertainment expenditure can never come under section 35B and therefore, the Tribunal erred in deleting the addition under section 37 (2A). High Court held that no such question had been referred to High Court. In the circumstances the High Court could not now permit the department to raise a new ground for the first time before the Court on the scope of section 35B vis-a-vis entertainment expenditure. However, it was clear that section 37 (2A) can apply if section 37(1) is applicable. In the circumstances the assessee's claim was upheld. (A.Y. 1978-79)

S. 40(a)(i) : Amounts not deductible – Deduction at source – Interest paid outside India – Finance charges – Foreign banker – Non-resident

The Assessing Officer denied claim for deduction of interest payment by assessee to foreign banker from business income under section 40(a)(i) as no tax was deducted at source, and assessee's claim was that payment represented finance charges at a certain percentage of supply bill received by it and, hence, formed part of purchase price for it. The High court held that under section 9 (1)(v), the interest income payable by a resident is deemed to accrue or arise in India and unless tax has been deducted at source as provided in Chapter XVII-B, the interest paid is not deductible. Thus the Tribunal was not justified in allowing the claim of deduction of interest. (A.Y. 1990-91)

Definition of the term “interest” as given in the DTAA is a narrower definition than that given in s. 2(28A), and the provisions of DTAA prevail upon the provisions of the Act. As per the definition of the term “interest” given in the DTAA, the interest amount specified in the MOA partakes the character of purchase price and does not fall within the definition of the term “interest” given in the DTAA. Therefore, interest amount specified in the MOA was a part of purchase price and therefore, the assessee was not liable to deduct tax at source on interest under section 195(1). Franchisee agreement did not stipulate payment to be made to the licensee for any work done on behalf of the assessee and it was merely a case of running a study centre and to apportion profits thereof between the assessee and the licensee and therefore provisions of section 194C were not applicable and no disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) can be made. Once assessee has obtained Form No. 15-I from the sub-contractors, he is not liable to deduct tax from the payments made to sub-contractors and no disallowance can be made under section 40(a)(ia). Belated furnishing of form No. 15I to the CIT is an act posterior in time to payments made under to sub-contractor and therefore, this cannot itself undo the eligibility of exemption created by second proviso to section 194C(3)(i) by virtue of submission of Form No. 15-I by the sub-contractors. Transportation of goods by railways does not fall within the ambit of "work" within the meaning of section 194C and therefore, there was no obligation on the assessee to deduct tax at source under section 194C from the payments made to Indian agents of foreign shipping lines for inland haulage of goods by railways and accordingly, no disallowance can be made under section 40(a)(ia). The Tribunal held that section is applicable in respect of amount paid also hence, the assessee failed to deduct the tax under section 194C, disallowance was justified. (A. Y. 2007-08).

S. 40(a)(ia) : Amounts not deductible – Deduction at source – Deposited before due date of filing of return – Amendment by FA 2010 is not retrospective

The Finance Act, 2010 amended section 40(a)(ia) w.r.e.f 1.4.2010 to provide that no disallowance would be made if the TDS was deposited on or before the due date for filing the return. The assessee claimed that the said amendment was "remedial and curative in nature" and applicable from AY 2005-06. The Special Bench held that, the amendment to section 40(a)(ia) by the FA 2010 was made retrospectively applicable only from AY 2010-11 and not earlier. It is nowhere stated that the amendment is curative or declaratory in nature nor is such an intention discernible. A provision giving relief cannot be regarded as retrospective only because the original provision caused hardship to the assessee. Section 40(a)(i) caused "intended difficulty" with the object of discouraging non-compliance with the TDS provisions. A partial relaxation in its rigor, inserted with prospective effect, cannot be treated as "retrospective". (A. Y. 2005-06)

S. 40(a)(ia) : Amounts not deductible – Short deduction at source – No disallowance for short-deduction TDS default [S. 194C]

Where it is a case of short deduction from payment as against non-deduction of TDS, disallowance under section 40(a)(ia) could not be made. Section 40(a)(ia) provides for a disallowance if amounts towards rent, etc have been paid without deducting tax at source. It does not apply to a case of short-deduction of tax at source. As the assessee had deducted under section 194C, it was not a case of “non-deduction” of TDS. If there is a shortfall due to difference of opinion as to which TDS provision would apply, the assessee may be treated as a defaulter under section 201 but no disallowance can be made under section 40(a)(ia). Assessing Officer disallowed such payments by invoking provisions of section 40(a)(ia) for non-deduction of tax at source under section 194C. According to assessee the number of persons from one family worked as casual labourers at site on daily wage basis and due to practical difficulties for preparing individual vouchers for each labour payment, only one voucher was prepared in name of head of family who received the money and if individual labourers were taken into consideration, payment did not exceed ₹ 50,000 in a year to each person. The nature of expenditure cannot be deduced merely on the basis of treatment accorded in account books, but has to be decided on the basis of substantive character of transaction. As hiring of tractors / trolleys for purpose of using them in business could not be equated to a contract for transportation for carriage as contemplated under section 194C, disallowance of expenses by invoking provisions of section 40(a)(ia) was unjustified. Section 40(b)(v) allows a deduction of payment of remuneration to a working partner if it is authorized by the partnership deed and is not in excess of the limits. Section 40(b)(v) does not lay down any condition that the partnership deed should fix the remuneration or the method of quantifying remuneration. Accordingly, CBDT Circular No. 739 dated 25.3.1996 which requires that either the amount of remuneration payable to each individual should be fixed in the agreement or the partnership agreement deed should lay down the manner of quantifying such remuneration goes beyond section 40(b)(v). The CBDT cannot issue a circular which goes against the provisions of the Act. The CBDT can only clarify issues but cannot insert terms and conditions which are not part of the main statute. A partnership deed which provides that the remuneration would be as per the provisions of the Act meaning thereby that the remuneration would not exceed the maximum remuneration provided in the Act is valid and deduction is admissible. S. 40(b) : Amounts not deductible – Interest to partners – Excessive or unreasonable

[S. 36(i)(ii), 40A(2)]

Assessee firm paid Interest to Partners and their family members at 12% / 18% p.a., as against Interest earned on FDR at average rate of 9% p.a. Assessing Officer worked Interest paid, in excess of interest received and disallowed same under section 40 A(2).

It was held that :

- i) If condition provided in section 36(i)(iii) that money must be borrowed for business, is satisfied then no disallowance be made except as per provisions of section 40(b).
- ii) Section 40(b) only restricts the allowance up to the limit prescribed in the section.
- iii) That provisions of section 40(b), being special provision, would prevail over general provisions of section 40A.

Based on above, in the instant case, as 40A(2) had no application, impugned disallowance of Interest being excessive was deleted.

S. 40A(2) : Expenses not deductible – Managing director – Remuneration

M is a Chartered Accountant from London and had quality experience as employee of AAF for ten years before joining the assessee Company. He is also stated to be running the entire business and other two directors are not so qualified and also did not take part in the business. Assessing Officer has not brought any evidence to show that the payment made to the Managing Director was excessive or unreasonable having regard to the fair value of the services for which the payment was made or the benefits derived from such services, the conditions of section 40A(2) are not satisfied. (A.Ys. 2002-03 to 2005-06).

S 40A(2)(a) : Expenses or payments not deductible – Sugar cane binding [S.37(1)]

Assessee manufacturer of sugar, purchased raw material; i.e., sugarcane from members as well as non-members. Minimum price of sugarcane fixed by Central Government, sugarcane brought in bound and unbound conditions. Factories allowed to deduct 0.01 per cent from sugarcane price as rebate towards binding material, Assessing Officer disallowed cost of binding material for both members as well as non-members. On appeal by assessee, Commissioner of Income Tax (A) deleted the additions made by Assessing Officer. Appeal filed by Revenue dismissed by I. T. A. T. In appeal the court upheld the order of Tribunal. (A.Y. 1992-93)

S. 40A(2)(b) : Expenses not deductible – Technical know-how – Parent Company [S. 92]

Once it is found that having regard to the nature, quantum and quality assurance aspects of technical know-how and other services provided to the assessee by the parent / foreign company, compensation paid in the form of royalty / consideration cannot be treated as excessive or unreasonable, Tribunal was justified in deleting the addition made by Assessing Officer by relying upon section 40A(2)(b) and section 92. (A.Ys. 1997-98 & 1998-99).

CIT v. Nestle India Ltd. (2011) 57 DTR 65 / 337 ITR 103 (Delhi) (High Court)

S. 40A(2)(b) : Expenses not deductible – Interest – Relatives – Debtors

Assessing Officer disallowed the Interest paid to relatives @ 24% on the ground that interest paid to others was only @ 12%. The disallowance made under section 40A(2)(b) as excessive or unreasonable, was deleted on following grounds :

- a) Assessee has recovered interest from Debtors @ 24%, and there was no loss of revenue to Assessee.
- b) The net interest was a credit figure, which was declared as income.
- c) In the past interest was paid @ 24% and no disallowances were made. (A.Y. 2005-06)

S. 40A(2)(b) : Expenses not deductible – Payment to relatives – Discount

A bare reading of the provisions reveals that such provision could be invoked only where an expenditure was incurred in respect to which, payment was to be made to sister concern. In case of discount on sales, no payment was made by the assessee as it only reduced the sale price. Therefore relying on the case of CIT v. Udhoji Shrikrishnadas 139 ITR 827 (MP) held that assessee was not covered under section 40A(2)(b). (A.Y. 2001-02)

S. 40A(3) : Expenses not deductible – Cash payments – Block assessment – GP – Estimated [S. 158BC]

Section 40A(3) applies to block proceedings. The provisions of block assessment are not special, or are a complete Code and the other provisions cannot apply. CIT v. Suresh N. Gupta (2008) 297 ITR 322 (SC) & M. G. Pictures (Madras) Ltd. v. ACIT (2003) 185 CTR 185 (Mad.) followed; Cargo Clearing Agency (Gujarat) v. Jt. CIT (2008) 218 CTR 541 (Guj.) not followed. The argument that if income is assessed by estimation on GP rate, no other disallowance can be made is not of universal application. If expenditure which is legally not permissible has been taken into account that can certainly be disallowed even where income is estimated.

During the year under consideration assessee made total purchases of India Telephone cards at ` 270.64 lakhs, of which ` 187.73 lakhs were by way of cash purchases. Assessing Officer invoked provisions of section 40A(3) and disallowed 20% of impugned expenditure. CIT(A) upheld the disallowance. The Tribunal held that on facts, it was apparent that relationship between service provider i.e. BSNL and assessee–distributor, was of principal and agent and income arising to assessee was in nature of commission or remuneration against services rendered, hence, disallowance under section 40A(3) is not applicable. S. 40A(9) : Expenses not deductible – Statutory Corporations – “force of law”

The assessee, a corporation setup under a State Act, made a contribution of ₹ 16.77 lakhs in its capacity as employer and as per the service regulations to the “MSW Karmachari Welfare Fund”. The Assessing Officer & CIT (A) took the view that the payment to a “fund” was hit by section 40A(9) and not allowable as a deduction. The Tribunal allowing the appeal held that section 40A(9) provides that no deduction shall be allowed in respect of “any sum paid by the assessee as an employer ... as contribution to any fund ... except where such sum is so paid ... as required by or under any other law for the time being in force”. In the case of statutory corporations, the regulations providing for the terms and conditions of employment and conditions of service have the force of law. Consequently, the service regulations framed by the assessee by which it agreed to make payment to the Fund carried statutory force and fell within the expression “as required by or under any other law” for purposes of section 40A(9). S. 41(1) : Profits chargeable to tax – Remission or cessation of Liability – Refund of excise duty

The respondent – assessee received a refund of excise duty. The assessee claimed it as a liability as the amount represented the liability to the stockists. The Assessing Officer assessed that amount as income under section 41(1), as the assessee had availed deduction thereof in the earlier years, when the money was paid to the excise department. Held, that the point in issue being substantially settled by the Apex court in Polyflex (India) (P) Ltd. v. CIT (2002) (7) SCC 188, the refund of excise duty was taxable under section 41(1). S. 41(1) : Profits chargeable to tax – Remission or cessation of liability – Change in identity of assessee [S. 28(iiib), 28(iiic), 176(3A)]

The assessee company took over an entire undertaking as going concern for a lump sum consideration. Later, the assessee received claim of export incentives filed by erstwhile proprietary in form of excise duty draw back and cash assistance, and claimed that those receipts were not in the nature of receipts, but were in the nature of realization of assets taken over as part of going concern, that excise duty refund received by it in the capacity of successor-in-business could not be taxed under section 41(1). The Assessing Officer accepted the fact that the provisions of section 41(1) were not applicable to excise duty refund. However he treated the cash assistance and duty draw back as business income, in view of sections 28 (iib) and 28 (iic). The Tribunal following the judgment of Apex court in the case of *Saraswati Industrial Syndicate Ltd v. Assessee, an existing pharmaceutical company, embarked upon expansion – cum diversification project for manufacturing of certain high-tech bulk drugs and for that purpose it floated a public issue of equity shares and assessee capitalized expenditure incurred on public issue and claimed depreciation under section 32 on such capitalized expenditure on ground that public issue was made in order to raise finance for new project including plant and machinery required for project. Since impugned expenditure was incurred for purpose of raising equity capital and not for purpose of acquiring plant and machinery, impugned expenditure, though capitalized, could not be held to have direct nexus with cost of acquisition of assets in question and therefore assessee was disentitled to depreciation as claimed. Bombay Drugs & Pharmas Ltd. v. Dy. CIT (2003) 4 SOT 493 (Mum.)(Trib.)

S. 43(1) : Definitions – Actual cost – Explanation 3 – No tax evasion

Explanation 3 to S. 43(1) will not apply if the purpose of transfer is not tax evasion by claiming depreciation with higher cost, but a pure commercial transaction.

If the process of computation by way of assessment is not made, it cannot be said that any depreciation was actually allowed. Depreciation debited in the books of account for the purpose of assessee's own calculation cannot be said to have been "actually allowed". Phrase "actually allowed" cannot be stretched to mean "notionally allowed" or allowable on a notional basis. Unless there is a process of assessment, there cannot be any presumption of allowance of depreciation because the words "actually allowed" mean depreciation actually allowed by the Assessing Officer in making the assessment. S. 43(5) : Definitions – Speculative transaction – Pre-A.Y. 2006-07 derivatives “speculation” losses have to be treated as “non-speculation” business losses for purposes of set-off

- (i) When an assessee suffers a loss in business, speculative or non-speculative, he has a statutory right to carry forward the unabsorbed loss and set it off against profits and gains from the same business for the next year. The true nature of the loss has to be determined in the year of set-off. A finding as to the character of the loss reached in the year of incurring the loss is not binding in the year of set-off of the loss, even though the assessment may have reached finality. As such dual characterization is permissible (Manmohan Das 59 ITR 699 (SC) & Western India Oil Distributing Ltd. 126 ITR 497 (Bom) followed);
- (ii) Though, as held in CIT v Bharat Ruia, derivatives transactions, prior to the amendment to section 43(5) w.e.f. A.Y. 2006-07, are “speculative transactions” and the losses suffered therefrom are “speculative losses”, the question whether they are eligible for set-off has to be determined as per the law prevailing in the year of set-off. As in the year of set-off, derivatives transactions are not, pursuant to the amendment to section 43(5), treated as "speculative transactions", the losses incurred prior to the amendment have to be treated as normal business losses and are eligible for set-off against all business income in accordance with section 72 (Shreegopal Purohit 33 SOT 1 distinguished);

- (iii) Also, the question whether the assessment order is erroneous or not has to be determined as per the then prevailing law and as it was then held that the amendment to section 43(5) was clarificatory and that derivative transactions were not speculative transactions, the order was not erroneous. (G. M. Stainless Steel 263 ITR 255 (SC) followed). (A. Y. 2006-07).

S. 43(6)(b) : Definitions – Written down value – Depreciation – Port trust

Port Trust was exempted under section 10(20) till 31-3-2002. As per the amendment by Finance Act, 2002 income of Port Trust was taxable for first time w.e.f. 1-4-2002. The Port Trust claimed depreciation on the original cost of assets which was disallowed by the Assessing Officer allowing depreciation on WDV as per the books. Held that as per section 43(6)(b) WDV is cost less depreciation actually allowed and not the depreciation 'allowable'. The phrase 'actually allowed' is thus limited to depreciation actually taken into account which was granted and it cannot be stretched to mean 'notionally allowed' or provided in books of account by having accounting entry hence depreciation allowable on Original cost. ## Section 43B : Certain deductions to be only on actual payment.

S. 43B : Deductions on actual payment – Contribution to provident fund – Retrospective

Retrospective effect to be given to the deletion of the second proviso to section 43B brought about by the Finance Act, 2003.

Deletion of the second proviso and consequent amendment in the first proviso to section 43B by the Finance Act, 2003 w.e.f. 1-4-2004 equating tax, duty, cess and fee with contribution to welfare funds was to overcome implementation problems. Once this uniformity is brought about in first proviso, the Finance Act, 2003 would become curative in nature. Hence, the change brought about by the Finance Act, 2003 would apply retrospectively w.e.f. 1-4-1988 when the first proviso was inserted.

S. 43B : Deductions on actual payment – Employees PF and ESIC [S. 2(24)(x) r.w.s. 36(1)(va)]

The assessee company claimed deductions for the A.Y. 1990-91 in respect of contributions made to the provident fund, Employee's provident fund and ESIC.

Income-tax Tribunal allowed all of them. On appeal by the Department, the Hon'ble High Court held as under.

The assessment in question was A.Y. 1990-91. The amendment is made applicable from the Asst. Year 2004-05 as far as provident fund dues are concerned. However, the section as it stood earlier was that the Employer's contribution to provident fund if not paid within the due date the employer was not entitled to deduction.

The Hon'ble High Court further held that the contribution of provident fund dues after closing of the accounting period, but before due date of filing returns are made, then also it was not allowable as deduction. (A.Y 1990-91).

Dismissal of the Special Leave Petition in CIT v. Vinay Cement Ltd. (2007) 213 CTR 268 (SC), cannot be said to be law decided.

Section 44 : Insurance business.

S. 44 : Insurance business – Non obstante clause – Provision for bad and doubtful debt

Section 44 dealing with the insurance business begins with a non obstante clause. Therefore, the jurisdiction of the assessing officer is limited only to the extent of what is provided in the First Schedule. Rule 5 of the First Schedule empowers the assessing officer to make any disallowance for any expenditure or allowance which is not admissible under sections 30 to 43A of the Act. "Provision for Income Tax" and "provision for bad and doubtful debt" not being in the nature of expenditure, the Assessing Officer cannot exercise any jurisdiction to disallow the same in relation to the insurance business. #### S. 44 : Insurance business – Insurance Act – Rule 5 First Schedule – Adjustment by AO

Section 44 read with Rule 5 of First Schedule makes figure of profit disclosed by profit and loss account drawn as per Insurance Act as absolute and binding both on assessee Insurance company as well as revenue and it is amenable only for adjustments expressly sanctioned by mandate of clauses (a) and (c) of Rule 5, for computing total income. Insurance company is required to be strictly assessed as per Rule 5 of First Schedule and it is not open to authorities under the Act to examine items separately debited or credited to profit and loss account with a view to determine their deductibility or inclusion in total income of assessee as per provisions of Act. (A.Y. 2004-05).

S. 44 : Insurance business – Investments written off – No add back

Write off /Write down of investments made in the books of account of the assessee for the assessment year 1990-91 can not be considered to be "expenditure" or "allowance". The guidelines permit the insurance company to book loss in the account rather than writing for actual realization of loss on sale of investment. Such "loss" can neither be considered as an "expenditure" nor an "allowance". Thus, investments written off cannot be added back in the computation of assessee's income chargeable to tax.

Applicant, incorporated in Singapore has entered into a time charter vessels hiring agreement for provision of its offshore service vessels to Transocean Offshore International Ventures Ltd. (TOIVL) in India who in turn is providing various offshore drilling and support services to ONGC. Being a time charter agreement, the entire operation, navigation and management of the vessel provided on hire is under the exclusive command and control of the applicant though the vessel is operated and services are rendered as requested by TOIVL. AAR observed that for the purposes of section 44BB of the Act, the vessels provided are covered under the definition of "plant". The consideration received for supply of "plant" i.e. the vessels on hire when used in the prospecting for or extraction or production of oil and gas is covered under the special provision for computing profits and gains under said section. AAR further held that said section will apply relying on its ruling in Geofizyka Torun Sp.zo.o., in AAR/813 of 2009 where it had held that if all the services that are in the nature of technical services within the meaning of Explanation 2 to section 9(1)(vii) are to be computed in accordance with 44DA, very little purpose will be served by incorporating special provision in 44BB for computing the profits in relation to the services connected with the exploration and extraction of mineral oils.

Applicant, a UAE company provides geophysical services to oil companies in India for which purpose it enters into Bareboat Charters ('BBC') with various international vessel providing companies ('VPC'); such agreements are executed outside India and the vessels would be delivered to and redelivered by the applicant outside India; also all payments due by the applicant to VPC would be received/paid outside India - AAR observed that mere physical presence of the non-resident's vessel in the territorial waters of India does not, without anything more, constitute a permanent establishment; further the non-resident owner of the vessel did not indulge in any business operations in India, thus, the criterion of business connection is ruled out; Next, it cannot be said that the income has been derived from an Indian source except in respect of vessels delivered or deemed to have been delivered in India; in case the Bareboat Charter Agreement was concluded outside India and delivery took place outside India, neither the origin of the income, i.e. the property or asset nor the activity giving rise to income can be said to be located in India and the vessel owner has not carried out any operations in India either directly or through the crew - Hence held hire charges paid by applicant under BBC to VPCs not taxable as no PE in India nor any source of income from India as agreement was executed outside India and the delivery of the vessel also took place outside India; but held taxable under section 44B in case of vessels delivered or deemed to have been delivered in India.

envisaged by said section, the computation provision therein would prevail over the computation provision of Sec 44DA and therefore income has to be computed in terms of Sec 44BB.

S. 44BBB : Foreign companies – Civil construction – Turnkey power projects – Computation

Applicant is an engineering, procurement and construction company. It is a subsidiary of Toshiba Corporation, Japan. It is awarded a contract by an Indian company that is implementing a power project at Mundra for erection of steam turbines, turbo generators, etc. Simultaneously, its holding company Toshiba Corp. is awarded an independent and distinct contract for off-shore supply of plant and machineries for the said power project. Learned departmental representative argues that the contract is a composite contract and that there is the possibility of nexus between the supply contract awarded to Toshiba Corporation and the Erection Contract awarded to the applicant that would impact the taxability of all the transactions taken together – AAR observed that both the contracts are independent of each other. The consideration received by M/s. Toshiba Corporation is not taxable in India for the offshore supply and facts of the case squarely fit into the description given in said section – Hence ruled that said section would apply; it would also apply in case applicant engages services of related party or third party for supply of labour for executing the work under the applicant's overall responsibility.

Section 44C : Deduction of head office expenditure in the case of non-residents

S. 44C : Non-residents – Head office expenditure – Total income [S. 2(45)]

'Total income' in Explanations (i) and (ii) connotes taxable income. The expression "total income" has been defined under section 2(45), to mean total amount of income referred in section 5 and computed in the manner laid down under the provision of the Act. Therefore, the words "total income" in the two items of Explanation connotes taxable income. Section 44C exclusively deals with deduction of head office expenditure in the case of non residents. It provides for computation of three types of expenses on the basis of deduction could be granted to the least of the three alternatives. Where adjusted total income for assessment year in question was nil, ITO was right in allowing nil expense as the least of three parameters mentioned in clauses (a)(b) and (c) of section 44C. Following unanimous views taken by Tribunal and Authority for Advance Ruling it was held that the deductions of any expenses are to be allowed against income in the nature of royalties and fees for technical services only in accordance with the provisions of domestic law. If the domestic law prohibits such deductions then such deductions would not be allowed.

Thus, section 44D has been considered to be the process of computation of business profits which provided restriction that the assessee is not entitled to any deductions contained in Ss. 28 to 44C of the Act. However, in view of the specific non obstante provisions contained in section 44D it was held that no deduction of any expenses would be allowed from income in the nature of royalties or fee for technical services received by the assessee i.e., the foreign company. Indian resident group company electronically purchases Business Information Reports ('BIRs') from Spanish group company, the applicant – issue is whether such payments to the Applicant will be treated as part of its business profits and hence be covered under the provisions of Article 7 of the Treaty – AAR observed that such payments are part of applicant's revenue receipts so the taxability will have to be considered under Article 7 read with Article 5 of the Treaty. The germane issue is whether the applicant has a PE in India within the meaning of Article 5 of the treaty. It observed that the Indian group company is carrying on in its own business and is an independent entity. It is not under the control and instructions of the applicant in carrying on its business. There is no material before it to conclude that it itself is an agent of the applicant and hence cannot be said to be the PE of the applicant. Further, such payments do not answer the description of "royalties" within the meaning of para 3 of Article 13 of the treaty as transaction of sale of BIRs can be equated or is akin to sale of a book, which does not involve any transfer of intellectual property – Hence ruled that payments are business receipts in hands of non-resident but as Indian company is independent entity, it is not an agent and hence no PE in India – Held payments not taxable in India.

The assessee, a company based in Cyprus, bought shares (100% together with another company) of a UK company called Finsider International, from another UK company. Finsider, UK, held 51% shares of Sesa Goa Ltd, India. The Assessing Officer took the view that the 51% shares in Sesa Goa held by Finsider, UK, constituted a capital asset under section 2(14) and that the transfer of the shares of Finsider amounted to a transfer of the said 51% shares of Sesa Goa and that the assessee was liable to deduct tax at source under section 195 when it bought the shares of Finsider, UK. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Capital loss – Tax planning – Colourable device – Shares in group companies

The assessee company filed a return declaring loss of ` 4,71,54,210/- for the A. Y. 2000-01. The learned Assessing Officer observed that the assessee company had outstanding liability of ` 19.77 crores, used for purchase of shares of group companies. According to Assessing Officer, the assessee company created capital loss by entering into transaction on the same date to evade tax liability. He disallowed the said capital loss on sale of shares on the ground that these shares were purchased from the funds made available by the group companies from the investment held by it. The learned Assessing Officer disallowed the loss. The learned CIT(A) upheld the said disallowance.

On appeal to Tribunal by the assessee, the Tribunal was of the view that no benefit of capital loss had been taken by the assessee till date by adjusting it against other long term capital gains. It further held that the transaction could not be thrown out merely because it was carried out a few days before amalgamation of the company. As noted by the Tribunal, neither the assessee company nor the amalgamated company adjusted the capital loss on account of sale of these shares against any long term capital gains even till A. Y. 2002-03. No tax benefit was, therefore taken by the assessee company for at least two years after the capital loss was booked by it. Therefore, it could not be said that the transactions in question were a colourable device, meant to gain some unfair tax advantage. Hence, no substantial questions of law is involved and it has to be dismissed. (A.Y. 2000-01)

Assessee-company had leased out a plot of land to a company for 72 years at annual rent. It had also received a sum as deposit from lessee which was repayable in 10 yearly installment with 9 per cent interest per annum. Assessing Officer considered 9 per cent of interest at lower side and taking into consideration market rate of interest at 18 per cent, brought differential amount of interest to tax as capital gains. As sections 45 and 48 do not make any provision for any deemed profit or gain to be taxable as capital gain, mere fact that Assessing Officer was of view that prevalent market interest rate was 18 per cent, could not render assessee liable for being taxed on differential amount as capital gains. S. 45 : Capital gains – Transfer – Development agreement – Power of attorney [S. 2(47)]

In cases of development agreements one cannot go by substantial performance of contract; in such cases year of chargeability is when contract is executed. On the facts as per agreement, when a limited power of attorney was given to deal with the property then that date would be the relevant date to decide the date of transfer under section 2(47)(v) of the Income Tax Act. If on a bare reading of a contract in its entirety, an Assessing Officer comes to the conclusion that in the guise of the agreement for sale, a development agreement is contemplated, then Assessing Officer is entitled to take date of the contract as date of transfer in view of section 2(47)(v). S. 45 : Capital gains – Business income – Shares – Borrowing

The fact that the assessee borrowed for the purpose of buying shares is not conclusive that the assessee intended to do business in shares and not merely invest in them if the interest is capitalized as cost of the shares & not claimed as a revenue expenditure (Shanmugam 120 ITD 469 (Pune) followed). The fact of borrowing cannot be held against the assessee if there are other predominating factors in favour. These are whether (a) the assessee was holding the shares in its books as an investor, (b) the assessee have any office or administration set up, (c) the shares were acquired out of own funds and family funds and not through borrowing, (d) there was not a single instance where the assessee had squared-up transactions on the same day without taking delivery of the shares, (e) In the previous and subsequent assessment years, the Assessing Officer had vide scrutiny assessments treated the assessee as an investor. S. 45 : Capital gains – Business income – Shares – Investor – Trader – Large volume in shares not deciding factor to hold assessee trader

The income of an assessee who has invested in shares to be assessed as capital gain if the following conditions are satisfied. If (a) The assessee was a good timer of purchase and sale of shares thereby substantially increasing his gains in the stock market, (b) The large turnover was because of bulk purchases and sales in a scrip. There were very few transactions of purchase and sale, as the assessee was purchasing in block of a particular share in large volume. Accordingly, large volume cannot be a deciding factor to hold as a trader, (c) the assessee was not a broker or sub-broker and did not have any office establishment, (d) The assessee did not do any speculative activity nor indulge in any sales without delivery, (e) The shares were shown as capital assets in the books of account, (f) The assessee had not pledged any shares with any financial institutions, nor borrowed any funds. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Business income – Shares – PMS transactions – Not business profits

Transactions carried out via PMS are in nature of transactions meant for Wealth maximization & not encashing profits on appreciation in value of shares. In case where assessee is engaged in systematic activity of holding of portfolio through PMS manager, it cannot be said that main object of holding the portfolio is to make profit by sale of shares. The high number of transactions are misleading as these are computer split transactions and not independent transactions. Hence, gains arising out of PMS transaction has to be assessed as Capital Gain and not business income. (A.Y. 2006-07)

- (ii) On facts, as the assessee had engaged a portfolio manager to look after its’ investments and all decisions to buy and sell were taken by the portfolio manager and not by the assessee, the assessee cannot be called a “dealer”;
- (iii) The object of the PMS was to maximize the value of the portfolio. It was “wealth maximization” and not “profit maximization”;
- (iv) In the balance sheet, the shares were valued at cost and not at lower of cost or market value. (A. Y. 2004-05)

S. 45 : Capital gains – Shares – PMS fee – NAV based – Deductible

- (i) In computing capital gains under section 48, payments are deductible in two ways, one by taking full value of consideration net of such payments and the other by deducting the same as "expenditure incurred wholly and exclusively in connection with the transfer". The expression "full value of consideration" contemplates additions and deductions from the apparent value. It means the "real and effective consideration", which can be arrived at only after allowing the deductible expenditure (CIT v Shakuntala Kantilal 190 ITR 56 (Bom) followed);
- (ii) The PMS fee, on profit sharing basis, was for the twin purposes of acquisition and sale of the securities. The fact that bifurcation between the two is not possible is not relevant. The department's argument that fee should be share-specific is absurd because fees for shares transactions is never share specific but is volume based;
- (iii) Accounting Standard 13 (Accounting for Investments) issued by ICAI provides that brokerage, fees and duties have to added to the cost of investments. The assessee's method of accounting is to proportionately load the PMS fees on the opening portfolio and investments made during the year which means that no deduction is claimed for the fees on the unsold investments;
- (iv) Devendra Kothari 50 DTR 369 (Mum) cannot be followed because (i) it unfortunately did not refer to the 'read down' interpretation of s. 48 as laid down in Shakuntala Kantilal and (ii) on facts, the claim there was on the entire turnover on global basis and not restricted to only investments. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Transfer – Assignment of interest by retiring partner to continuing partner [S. 2(47), 47(ii)]

The continuing partners agreed to pay to the retiring partner for assigning or release of interest by retiring partner in favour of continuing partners. The transaction would amount to a transfer within the meaning of section 2(47). If the retiring partner is paid something over and above sum standing to credit of his capital account, there would be a capital gain chargeable to tax. In view of amendment carried out by

Finance Act, 1987 by omitting section 47(ii), profits or gains arising from transfer of a capital asset by a firm to a partner on dissolution or otherwise would be chargeable as firm's income in previous year in which transfer took place and for purposes of computation of capital gains, fair market value of assets would be consideration received or accruing as a result of transfer. Assessee acquired 10 percent of share holding in company at par value in exchange for shares in two companies also at par. Mauritius Company acquired 45 percent of share holdings in same company at premium. There was no proof that transactions were linked in same chain. There was no proof that market value of shares at time of purchase by assessee was higher than price paid by him. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Transfer – Part performance of contract

Assessee company purchased a piece of agricultural land on 20-11-1999. It entered into an agreement for sale of said land with "K" on 5-9-2002 and executed a power of attorney in favour of "M" a representative of "K" authorising him to cultivate said land and to sell agricultural produce grown on it. The said power of attorney was registered before sub-registrar on 21-11-2002. Sale consideration had been paid to assessee through cheque prior to 5-9-2002. Assessee claimed that transfer of land got completed on 21-11-2002 and therefore, capital gains arising on sale of land was to be assessed as long term capital gains. However, the Assessing Officer took date of execution of power of attorney and agreement to sell. i.e. 5-9-2002, to be date of transfer and assessed capital gains as short term capital gains. The Tribunal held that, once a document is registered, it is effective from date when it was executed. Therefore, power of attorney, even though registered on 21-11-2002, would be effective from 5-9-2002 and as possession of land had been given on 5-9-2002 when the power of attorney was executed, all ingredients of section 53A of Transfer of Property Act were satisfied in instant case on 5-9-2002 and accordingly transfer of land had duly taken place on 5-9-2002. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Business income – Shares – Held for 30 days & less [S. 28(i)]

To decide whether a gain is capital gain or business income, holding period is one of the criteria. The principles that have to be applied are (a) the intention of the assessee at the time of purchase, (b) whether borrowed funds were used, (c) the frequency of purchase and sales, (d) the treatment in the books etc. No single criteria is conclusive and an overall view has to be taken (Associated Industrial Development 82 ITR 586 (SC) & Holck Larsen 160 ITR 67 (SC) followed). (A. Ys. 2003-04, 2004-05 & 2006-07)

S. 45 : Capital gains – Loss on pro-rata reduction of share capital is “Notional” – In absence of consideration, capital gains provisions do not apply

- (i) When the face value of each share was reduced from ₹ 10 to ₹ 5 and then two shares of ₹ 5 each were consolidated into one share of ₹ 10 each, the earlier shares were replaced or substituted by new shares, and there was no “transfer” but it was merely a case of substitution of one kind of share with another kind of share.
- (ii) Assuming that a reduction of shares in the manner done by the assessee amounts to a “transfer”, section 45 is not attracted because there is no “consideration” received by the assessee for the transfer.
- (iii) Further, by the reduction, the assessee’s rights had not been extinguished because it continued to hold the same percentage in the holding of Times Guarantee as it did before the reduction.

Minority view is that,

- (i) A reduction of capital by cancellation of shares results in a “transfer”;
- (ii) The consideration received by the assessee was Nil. It was not a case where the consideration was incapable of ascertainment;
- (iii) On the point that there is no “loss”, the argument that as with the reduction of capital, there is a corresponding increase in the net worth per share and the assessee’s interest in TGL remains unaffected on an overall basis is not acceptable because after the reduction, the assessee is left with lesser number of shares. The fact that the book value has increased has no effect. An increase or decrease in the market value of shares is of no consequence if the shares are held as investment;
- (iv) the apprehension that the assessee would derive a double advantage by claiming the loss now and the entire cost at the time of sale is unfounded because (a) the assessee’s books shows the investments at the reduced amount and (b) under section 55(2)(iv)(v), the cost of acquisition of the remaining consolidated shares will be the reduced amount. In respect of gain on sale of shares held for more than 365 days, when in the past the department has accepted the sale of shares held for more than a year as investment and profits thereon has been assessed under the head "capital gains" the gain should be assessed as long term capital gains. In respect of other shares with frequent transactions where shares are held for more than a month they should be treated as investment and assessable as short term capital gains. Where the shares are held less than a month the same may be treated as profit from business. (A.Ys. 2005-06, 2006-07)

S. 45 : Capital gains – Sale of shares [S. 28(i)]

Principles to be applied while deciding whether sale of shares is capital gain or business income.

As per the books of account, the assessee has treated the entire investment in shares as an "investment" and not as "stock-in-trade";

The assessee is not a share broker nor he is having a registration with any Stock Exchange;

Almost 83% of the capital gain is from shares that were held for a long period of time;

There were no derivative transactions by the assessee;

There were no transactions without delivery;

The assessee used his own surplus funds for investing in shares and not borrowed any money;

In the preceding years, the assessee consistently declared the gain/profit on the sale of the shares as 'Capital Gains' and the same has been accepted by the A.O. Though the rule of res judicata is not applicable to income-tax proceedings, in the absence of change in facts, there should be consistency in the approach of the Revenue;

The assessee received substantial dividend on the investments (A.Y. 2004-05)

Where the assessee has investment in shares under the head “investment” in the balance sheet for many years and the same is accepted by the Assessing Officer in the past, there is no justification for treating the activity of the assessee of purchase and sale of shares as “business” mainly on the reason of the volume of transactions, particularly when no money has been borrowed for making investment in shares. #### S. 45 : Capital gains – Holding period – Conversion – Stock-in-trade – Capital asset

When stock in trade is converted into capital asset, the holding period of capital asset for the purpose of computing capital gains is to be reckoned from the date of conversion of stock in trade into capital asset because prior to that date, the asset was not held as capital assets; after conversion of stock-in-trade of shares into capital assets, shares were not held for 12 months before sale and therefore exemption under section 10(38) was not allowable. S. 45 : Capital gains – Sale of land – Trees and plants – Agricultural income – Composite sale

The assessee, a Chartered Accountant by profession, sold land with trees and claimed ₹ 14.92 lakhs as expenses from the sale consideration of ₹ 10 lakhs as exempt agricultural income although this amount was part of sale due under which the land was sold. The Assessee contented that the vendee had paid a sum of ₹ 10 lacs towards the total reimbursements of sale proceeds of the trees, plants and other existing crops and horticulture and it was included in the total value. The Assessing Officer held that it was a composite sale along with the land. Hence, it could not be treated separately as agricultural income. He made addition of ₹ 10,03,814/-. CIT(A) confirmed the assessment order. The Tribunal held that, although this amount was part of sale deed under which the land was sold, the part of sale proceeds was not agricultural income. Deduction was allowed on entire indexed cost of acquisition. (A.Y. 2006-07)
